Planners To View Proposal To Plant Houses On Farm

By Sue Aucella Deacon

The "best farm in Andover" — a farm town meeting tried to preserve as farmland three years ago — has been proposed as the site of a 28-lot cluster subdivision in plans that will come before the Planning Board next month.

D & L Development Corp. of Methuen this week filed plans for a single-family residential development with the Community Development and Planning department, staff planner Nancy Jeton told the TOWNSMAN yesterday, for what is now Dargoonian Brothers farm.

The 33-acre farm, owned by Benjamin and Garabed Dargoonian of Blanchard Street, is bounded by Blanchard and Osgood streets.

The Dargoonians may continue to operate a farm in Andover, however. According to town officials, the Dargoonians have purchased a neighboring piece of property from the state, and apparently plan to clear that wooded acreage and start a new farm there.

Benjamin Dargoonian declined to comment on his family's plans for the farm this week.

However, Jeton said D & L Development has filed plans for a cluster subdivision on the farmland, and the planning board will take their first look at that proposal on Sept. 25. The plans call for three streets, 25 clustered lots, and three Form A lots (lots with frontage on an existing street), Jeton said.

The Lawrence Registry of Deeds has no record of a transfer of ownership on the property as of this week. Jeton noted that it is common for a developer to hold an option to purchase property and wait for planning board approval of a proposed development before finalizing a sale.

Earlier this month, the Dargoonians offered the town the option to buy the farm for $700,000. The Board of Selectmen declined the offer, explaining that Andover could not afford that pricetag. They also voted unanimously to waive a 60-day period the Dargoonians would have been required to wait before selling the land to another buyer.

By law, Andover had the right of first refusal on the farm because it is assessed as agricultural property, rather than at its market value, allowing the farmers a tax advantage. According to town assessors' records, the farmland has been valued at a total of $217,000.

In June 1981, annual town meeting voted to take steps to preserve Dargoonian Brothers farm by taking advantage of the state's Agricultural Preservation Restriction (APR) act. Although it won voters' support, that plan later fell through, and no agricultural preservation restriction was ever placed

Extending Business Zone In Park Street Area Proposed

By Sue Aucella Deacon

A Park Street property-owner would like to see the central business district expanded to include his residential property, and he may bring that request to annual town meeting next spring, according to Nancy Jeton of the Community Development and Planning department.

Daniel Morin of 72 Park St. would like to rezone his property from Single Residence A to General Business zoning, Jeton told the Planning Board Tuesday night — and he could be just the first property-owner in the area to come before the board with that idea.

The planners indicated that although they are working on a proposal to extend the central business district (CBD), they were not yet ready to discuss the expansion in specific terms.

They did not, therefore, offer any opinion on the Morin proposal: "I have no reason to like or dislike it," Chairman Margaret Bradshaw said. But, she added, "We have to have some rationale" for expanding the CBD in any direction before making any rezoning recommendations to 1985 town meeting.

Jeton explained that Morin was aware of the board's interest in possibly expanding the CBD; if they were to recommend rezoning of specific parcels, she said, Morin asked the board to consider his. If not, the planner said, Morin would submit his own rezoning article to spring town meeting.

Morin's property is just beyond Lee Dodd Realty and the Andover Gallery at 68 Park St., Jeton said, on the edge of the existing business district; the site has only one residential neighbor. Other nearby business sites include Merrinack Engineering Services at 66 Park St. and Andover Interior Designs at 38 Florence St.

The Morin lot is large enough to provide parking for about 20 cars, the planner said, so it could be developed as a business site without adding to existing

Red Cross Receives UF Funds

The executive committee of the Merrimack Valley United Fund board of directors approved a supplemental allocation of $1,022 to the Greater Lawrence Red cross for local disaster services. The Greater Lawrence Chapter American Red Cross, one of 69 United Fund member agencies, has received a total allocation of $150,462 this year from the Merrimack Valley United Fund.

The Greater Lawrence Red Cross Disaster Team responds to emergency situations in Greater Lawrence including fires and the spring flood of the Merrimack River which forced Methuen residents to evacuate their homes. Red Cross volunteers provide disaster victims with first aid, emergency shelter, food, clothing and household goods. The Red Cross also provides hot coffee and food for the area fire fighters and national guardsmen during these disasters.

Earth Removal Permit Vote Is Delayed

A Planning Board vote on a special permit for earth regrading and removal at a proposed industrial park has been delayed until next month.

The planners were scheduled to vote on the special earth removal permit for Riverside Park on Tuesday night. The office and research park has been proposed for a 32-acre site on River Road, next to the vocational school.

However, staff planner Nancy Jeton pointed out that to vote on the permit, at least four planners who attended a public hearing on the permit last month must be present. On Tuesday, one planner who had attended the July hearing was absent (Russ Moran), while one of the four planners present this week had missed that hearing (Andrew Girdwood).

Jeton said she would reschedule the vote for the board's Sept. 11 meeting.

Appeals Board In Session Thursday

North Andover funeral director John Caron will ask the Board of Appeals for a variance so he may run a funeral business on Elm Street at next Thursday's Zoning Board of Appeals meeting, set for 7:30 p.m., in the second floor conference room of the school administration building, off Whittier Street.

Also on the agenda are representatives of the Bay Bank Merrimack Valley who will request a special permit to construct a branch office on River Road. And Phillips Academy officials will ask the board for a variance to add onto their admissions building, which is now too close to the lot lines.

Trees Can't Be Used For Signs

As fall approaches, bringing with it garage sales and the final months of 1984's political battles, Town Manager Kenneth Mahony believes it's a good time to remind townspeople that attaching signs of any kind to town-owned trees is illegal.

The manager points out that according to Massachusetts law (Chapter 87, Section 9), affixing any notice, sign or advertisement to a tree in a public way is prohibited, as is cutting, painting or marking such trees.

The law states that enforcement is the responsibility of the town tree warden (in Andover, James L. Bamford of the Municipal Maintenance department), and violators may be charged fines of up to $50.

The exception to the law: when a sign is intended to protect a tree or the public. The tree warden must issue a written permit for such notices.

Receives Scholarship

Marcia L. Reagan, a senior in Merrimack College's cooperative education program is the recipient of the Michael J. Iannazzi Scholarship. The $1,000 scholarship was established by Louis and William Iannazzi of the Urban Electrical Company of Methuen to honor their father, the retired president of the company.

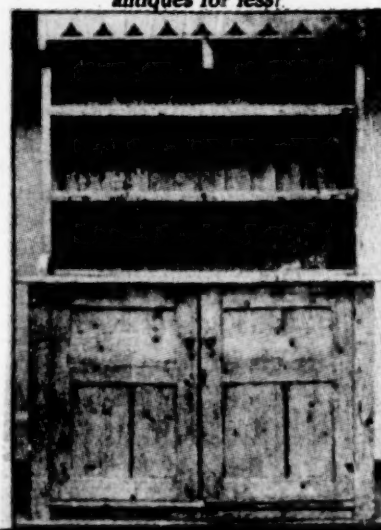

The scholarship is given each year to an electrical engineering student at Merrimack who is a resident of the Merrimack Valley and has maintained a 2.5 cumulative academic average and demonstrated leadership qualities in the community.

A 1974 graduate of Andover High School, Reagan received an associate's degree in engineering science from Northern Essex Community College. She and her seven year old son, Derek, reside in Andover.

DCS To Hold Class At Community Canning Center

Do you have extra fruits and vegetables leftover from your garden and you're just not sure what to do with them? The Department of Community Services, in conjunction with the Community Canning Center at the Essex Agricultural and Technical Institute, will sponsor Preserving your Garden Harvest on Tuesday and Thursday, Sept. 11 and 13, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

At least 85 percent of the food consumed in Massachusetts is shipped in from out of state. Shipping costs and middleman profits result in higher consumer prices. The Community Canning Center allows the user to combat these higher prices by using Massachusetts grown food, safely preserved at lower costs to the consumer. The Community Canning Center opened in 1980, and during its first year in operation produced 5,325 pints and half pints of preserved foods brought in by 633 people from 38 communities.

The Canning Center's main goals are to promote safe canning procedures and stimulate agriculture in Massachusetts through the preservation of locally grown fruits and vegetables and to inform the community about their services through area outreach programs. Their trained staff will explain use of the equipment and provide guidance. The center will hold and test samples of each batch to insure safety of each product for consumption. Students in the Preserving your Garden Harvest class will be asked to bring fresh fruits and vegetables, ripe but not overripe, desired spices or sweeteners to add to preserved foods and canning jars and lids. Participants are required to wear shoes, long pants and a shirt or blouse.

Register at the Department of Community Services office in the Town Offices on Bartlett Street Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Elks Plan Outing Sunday

The Andover Lodge of Elks will hold their annual men's outing on Sunday, Sept. 2, at the Elks Lodge, 400 South Main St., from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., rain or shine. There will be food and games all day long, starting with a full breakfast followed by hot dogs, hamburgers, corn on the cob, steamed clams, chicken and lobsters with free beer throughout the day. All men from the surrounding communities are invited to attend. Tickets may be obtained at the lodge and from Bill Holland or Bill Townsend.

K. of C. To Conduct Benefit

The Knights of Columbus in Massachusetts will undertake its Eighth Annual Tootsie Roll Drive, a state-wide campaign to acquire funds for its charity program, September 27, 28, 29 and 30. The Knights of Columbus Charity Program provides financial aid to physically handicapped children under the age of 20 and to mentally retarded regardless of race, creed or religion.

Members of the various councils throughout the state, assisted by friends and neighbors, will distribute Tootsie Rolls at supermarkets, banks, shopping centers and other business establishments and accept donations on behalf of the handicapped.

In the Andover area, members of Andover Council, their families and friends will join the thousands of volunteers throughout the state to benefit the physically and mentally handicapped.

Since the inception of the K. of C. Tootsie Roll Program, the Knights of Columbus in Massachusetts have contributed grants in excess of $1,500,000 to aid the handicapped and organizations caring for the handicapped.

Kitchen Design

David A. Clement, designer

Kitchens are opening up and including adjacent areas in a revival of the old "keeping room." Remember that cozy spot in a house where the whole family assembled to talk, create a project or just relax? Of course, family dining, even entertaining, remains a function of this new-found or revived social area. To create a family kitchen, the necessary space must be there or acquired. If the kitchen is cramped, look to surrounding areas, such as a porch, utility room or pantry for extra space. You may even decide that a little-used formal dining room would be more functional as a family activity area. If so, visualize the entire area as one large room without dividing walls.

Because of the versatility your kitchen has the items you have in your kitchen should be equally diverse. Come to WINDSOR KITCHENS at 1181 Boston Rd., Ward Hill, and let our staff show you how remodeling your kitchen with up-to-date cabinets will add convenience, space and beauty to your life. If you've expanded your kitchen area to your family room or dining room we also have terrific cabinets to give you a coordinated look. See us Mon-Thurs. 9:5:30; Fri. til 8; Sat. til 2 & by appt. for factory of custom cabinets. Tel. 372-3444. We wish all our readers a safe Labor Day holiday.

College Shares In Endowment

The New England Colleges Fund, an association of the Independent College Funds of America (I.C.F.A.), announced that it has received $37,700 from the UPS Foundation Endowment Fund which will be distributed to Merrimack College and 28 other colleges and universities in New England.

"This is a 54 percent increase over last year's distribution," said Harry K. Herrick, executive director of the New England Colleges Fund. "It demonstrates the continuing commitment of the private sector to the support of higher education."

The local distribution is part of $770,000 generated by the UPS Foundation Endowment this year, which will go to 592 I.C.F.A. member colleges across the nation. The UPS Foundation, which is supported by grants from United Parcel Service, is the single largest contributor to the I.C.F.A. national program.

Herrick said that nearly $2.8 million has been distributed to independent colleges and universities since the UPS Foundation Endowment Fund at I.C.F.A. was established by UPS in 1974.

Other schools benefitting from this year's distribution include Amherst, Brandeis, Clark, Gordon, Hampshire, Holy Cross, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Regis, Simmons, Smith, Stonehill, Tufts, Wellesley, Wheaton and Williams.

Subscription Series Offered

Andover Community Theatre announces the start of a Subscription Series for its 1984-85 season. The series offers a ticket to each of A.C.T.'s six productions (four adult shows and two special children's productions). Choice seating will be reserved at each performance for subscriptionholders.

The plays to be presented are.

Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap," October 19, 20, 21, 26 and 27. The longest running play in theatrical history, this is a classic who-done-it that contains all the plush settings, fascinating characters, plot twists and unexpected turn of events that have become Christie trademarks.

"The Boyfriend," November 16, 17 and 18, is an irrepressible musical romp set in the Roaring 20's. This production will be put on by the junior high school-age members of A.C.T.

"Never Too Late," February 8, 9, 10, 15 and 16, is a light-hearted comedy centered around a middle-aged couple's "developing" predicament. This play takes a warm, humorous look at a very contemporary issue.

"Cinderella," March 29, 30 and 31, is the most oft-told and beloved of fairy tales. This enchanting story will be performed by A.C.T.'s youngsters (ages 6-12).

Michael Bennett's "SeeSaw," April 26, 27, 28 and May 3 and 4, is a breezy, brassy musical and an intimate, bittersweet comedy all rolled into one. This early Bennett show contains the same creative energy and brilliance apparent in his later Broadway hits, "Chorus Line" and "Dreamgirls."

"Gershwin," August 2, 3, 8, 9, and 10, is an original revue based on the music of one of America's foremost composers. A.C.T. is proud to present a show created by two of its members, E.R. Boutin and Tom Kirkman.

The price of the series is $28 ($12 off the door price). Also available is a choice of four productions for $23. The series will be available at the A.C.T. desk at the Department of Community Services' registration September 12, or mail name, address, telephone number, desired subscription series and check or money order to: Andover Community Theatre, P.O. Box 147, Ballardvale Station, Andover, MA 01810.

Beginning Ministry Study Is Also A Sign Of Gratitude

By Susan Rand

She is not sure where it will lead her but Sandra L. Rehe will begin study at Boston University's School of Theology, in Boston, a week from today and may end up, three years from now, an ordained minister in the Methodist Church.

Sandi has toyed with the idea of entering the seminary for two years. Now her second vocation, as she calls it, will begin thanks to a full scholarship to the graduate school where she must attain high grades to keep her award for the entire three years of her program. She was awarded the Wesley Scholarship, which is set aside for members of the Methodist Church entering Boston University's seminary who are seeking ordination into a United Methodist Conference.

Sounding a bit unnerved by the prospect of being a student again, Sandi agreed that she would be "hitting the books" soon. But if she appears nervous about exploring the faith she has lived with since a child, Sandi has had a few speaking engagements behind the pulpit that have convinced her that it is a "very comfortable" place.

The 45 year-old mother of three who once taught high school Spanish grew up participating in her Ohio Methodist church. There were Sunday morning church services, Sunday school lessons, vacation bible school and the Methodist Youth Fellowship. At family gatherings a cousin would play hymns on the piano while the others joined in singing their favorites, she explained.

Always aware of what she wrote in an essay for admission to Boston University was a "simple but very strong faith" Sandi explained that while her decision to enter the seminary has been strengthened in the past two years it was also "a lifetime in the making," she wrote.

Sandi's family is supporting her new career 100 percent. Daughters Dana, 21, and Kathy, 19, said they were really excited about their mother's attending Boston University. She graduated summa cum laude from Ohio State University with a degree in education some time ago, said Dana, and she may be nervous about "making the grade," the eldest daughter confided, but she said she knew her mother was equal to the task.

"I always knew she could do it," Dana said of Sandi's acceptance at Boston University.

Along with Dana and Kathy, Sandi and her husband, Warren, have a son, David, who is 15. Sandi's mother Clara Harris also lives with the family at their 3 Hampton Lane home.

Sandi also has the support of the Ballardvale United Church. Ballardvale minister Gary Cornell invited Sandi to the Methodist Bishop's convocation on the ministry, a conference last January held at the Rolling Ridge Conference Center, a Methodist retreat on the shores of Lake Cochichewick in North Andover. After that weekend Sandi explained that she was unsure of her future but knew that she was ready for "some sort of ministry."

The Pastor Parish Relations committee at the church met with the seminary candidate and recommended her endorsement by the entire congregation at the annual meeting April 29.

Central to her desire to spread the word of her God is an experience Sandi had 16 years ago. As she relates the events of that day, Sandi is quick to say that she is skeptical of faith healings and not all together convinced "that miracles still happen today."

On Sunday the wooden pews of her church were making the curvature of her spine ache and Sandi told God that she knew he could straighten her spine if he wanted to. She explained that in her spiritual "conversation" she was asked if she would spread the word if her back was healed, a quick yes from Sandi and her shoulders were straight for the first time in her life.

She passed mirrors all afternoon to be sure the curve was gone and then shared her story with her family and children. Soon small groups in which she was involved had heard Sandi's story. For proof, she always carries a photograph of how she stood before her healing.

Two years ago, during the absence of the minister at the Ballardvale United Church, Sandi filled in and related her healing story to the congregation. Weeks later her home church, in Columbus, Ohio, heard Sandi's story

Realtors Signing Voters

A major nonpartisan voter registration project call "Register five...for Freedom!" aimed at registering realtors, their families and the general public, was announced by the Greater Lawrence Board of Realtors.

The Greater Lawrence Board's objective is to ask each of its 530 members to urge at least five people to register and vote in the November general election.

From now until October 9, the Greater Lawrence Board of Realtors will use volunteers from its Realtors Active Politics (RAP) program to provide detailed voter registration information to interested persons. "The 1984 general election will be critical for this country at every level," said Thomas R. Peterson, president. "Realtors have a unique ability to reach people who have recently moved into or within their community and who need to register or re-register to vote."

The project is part of a national program sponsored by the 625,000 member National Association of Realtors which is encouraging its state associations and local board to make the voter registration project a priority this election year.

"We intend to take dvantage of our daily contact with the public to encourage people to fully exercise their citizenship rights," said Donald H. Treadwell, president of the National Association of Realtors. He noted that the voter registration project has been commended by the chairmen of both the Democratic and Republican national committees.

Cleverness is not wisdom.

CONSUMER RIGHTS

The Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act is an effective law that provides consumers with extensive protections against unfair and deceptive practices. Regulations have been enacted by the Attorney General that govern the advertising, sale and repair of automobiles, appliances and home improvements, as well as most other consumer purchases. Other regulations govern debt collection practices and landlord/tenant relations.

An attorney familiar with these regulations can assist in determining whether you have a consumer protection claim. Contact John S. Wessler.

Authority Gets Grant

State Transportation Secretary Frederick P. Salvucci announced that the Merrimack Valley Regional Transit Authority (MVRTA) will receive a check for $463,500, representing 90 percent of the state's share of the agency's operating costs for 1984.

"We are pleased to be able to provide the MVRTA and all other RTAs around the state with this funding three months earlier than anticipated," said Salvucci. "This will allow the MVRTA, which services 1.2 million riders each year, to continue to offer their vital services of fixed route transportation and elderly and handicapped service.

"This award demonstrates Governor Michael S. Dukakis' commitment to provide quality transportation to the people of the Commonwealth."

Joseph Costanzo, administrator of the MVRTA, said, "This state aid is a very important part of our funding. I'm happy that we're receiving 90 percent of the money early as it will greatly help our cash flow."

Winston Churchill's memory was so fine that he could repeat verbatim a lecture or a whole Shakespearean play.

Tucker Supports Plan

Cleaning up hazardous waste is the focus of a four-point plan recently endorsed by State Representative Susan Tucker. The plan is being promoted throughout the state by members of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) as part of their "Campaign to Clean Up Hazardous Waste."

"A pledge to support this plan demonstrates a concern for the future of our Commonwealth, a future where toxic wastes need not threaten to contaminate our water and health," said Mindy Lubber, director of the campaign.

The plan, which all state legislators have been asked to endorse, calls for:

Setting a ten-year timetable for cleaning up all of Massachusetts' estimated 1000 hazardous waste dumpsites;

Enacting strict penalty measures to stop illegal and unsafe waste handling and disposal practices;

Establishing a fair system for compensating victims of hazardous waste dumping; and Creating incentives for industry to reduce their production of wastes through "source reduction" techniques.

"We would like to thank Representative Tucker for joining us in this effort to reduce the toxics threat in Massachusetts," continued Lubber. "Her leadership will be critical this fall in helping to pass the Pollution Penalties Bill." That bill (S2116), currently in the Senate Ways and Means Committee, would enable the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) to fine companies that violate hazardous waste or pollution laws in an effort to stop illegal dumping. MASSPIRG anticipates that industry will wage an all out lobbying effort against the bill. Bills will be introduced for next year's legislative session to expedite dumpsite cleanup, to establish a compensation system for victims and to promote "source reduction."

In all, 50 legislators have pledged their support for the plan in the campaign's first month. "The fact that in the middle of the summer one fourth of our state's lawmakers have already signed on to this platform demonstrates the overwhelming sense of urgency people are feeling at the grass roots level," added Lubber. "Hazardous waste is without doubt the number one environmental health threat facing Massachusetts today."

State Senator Patricia McGovern has not yet responded to the platform. Members of MASSPIRG will continue to ask for her support in the upcoming weeks. State Senator Buell, at a recent meeting in Reading, endorsed the Pollution Penalties bill while withholding support for the rest of the platform.

MASSPIRG is a statewide, non-profit, non-partisan, environmental and consumer lobby with more than 60,000 members.

The church-sponsored school has been in operation since 1969 and is non-sectarian. The school offers scholarships and actively seeks diversity in its student population, including children with mild special needs. Contact Susan Rice for further information.

The school is committed to promoting the development of three and four year olds in all areas. At the beginning of the year, social development is particularly important. For many children at this age this is their first experience with care-takers other than their parents. To make the transition from home to school easier, deConstant has designed an orientation sequence. First, all students will receive a personal card welcoming them to the school before the first day of school. Second, parents will be offered an orientation meeting September 12 at 7:30 p.m. Finally, there will be orientation days for the children; three-year-olds on Thursday, Sept. 13, and four-year-olds on Friday, Sept. 14.

Last year this orientation process worked very well. As deConstant put it, "we didn't have a single tear last year."

Mousetrap Auditions Scheduled

Andover Community Theatre will hold auditions for Agatha Christie's murder mystery, "The Mousetrap," September 5 and 6 at West Elementary School, Beacon Street, Andover, at 7:30 p.m.

The play has a cast of eight characters:

Mollie Ralston, owner of the English Guest House where the play is set, is a spirited young woman haunted by a terrible secret from her past.

Giles Ralston, Mollie's husband, a rather arrogant, but attractive, man who becomes increasingly suspicious and suspect as the play progresses.

Christopher Wren, a rather wild-looking, neurotic young man, has a confiding, almost childish manner and an eerie love of the macabre.

Mrs. Boyle, a bad-tempered English dowager, is quick to criticize those who don't meet her standards and first to point an accusatory finger.

Major Metcalf, a middle-aged man, very military in manner and bearing, but, is his obliging nature and sense of fairness a cover-up for a darker side?

Miss Casewell, a bitter young woman with a snippy, caustic attitude who is determined to escape her past.

Mr. Paravicini, the dark, mysterious foreigner who shows up unexpectedly, is a curious combination of charm and malevolence.

Sergeant Trotter, a cheerful young man determined to unravel the puzzle presented by the guests at the Manor.

These parts will be challenging and fun for the actors. In addition, the play, with its plush setting and wonderful mood and atmosphere, offers a great opportunity for people to be creative behind-the-scenes.

Tomatoes

Tomatoes are low in calories, rich in vitamin C and a good source of vitamin A. One medium-size tomato, raw, provides almost half the vitamin C for the day plus about one third of the vitamin A. Field-ripened tomatoes are higher in vitamin C than fall and winter, green-house tomatoes. Tomatoes retain a good share of their vitamins when canned or cooked, though fresh tomatoes are highest in nutritional value.

Exhibit

The Boston University Program in Artisanry will present "The Equinox Exhibit" featuring four Master of Fine Arts graduates: fiber by T.P. Candidates' Forum

The four candidates for the 5th Congressional District seat will meet Tuesday, Sept. 11, at 7:30 p.m. at Methuen High School in a forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters and Board of Trade.

It will be televised live by Continental Cablevision for residents of Lawrence and Methuen.

The forum will provide voters an opportunity to learn where the candidates stand on many of the important issues confronting the nation.

Both the League of Women Voters and Board of Trade are committed to voter education and are undertaking this project to educate the voters and provide the candidates with the chance to reach the voters in greater Lawrence.

The forum is free and the public is invited.

Temple To Honor Secretary

Lillian Kessel has retired as secretary of the Temple Emanuel Religious School, Haggetts Pond Road, Andover, after 27 years of devoted service. She began her school responsibilities when Temple Emanuel was located in Lawrence and was a community-based school. For the past ten years she has served the religious school of Temple Emanuel exclusively.

At the Sabbath Evening Service, Friday, Sept. 7, at 8:15 p.m., a tribute will be paid to Lillian Kessel for her caring concern for students and parents.

She has touched the lives of thousands of Jewish children and has helped to nurture them to maturity and graciously welcomed their return as they became parents and enrolled a new generation of children in the religious school.

Kessel and her husband, Benjamin, live in Lawrence. Their daughter, Elayne, who went through the ranks of the religious school, has taught in the Temple Emanuel Religious School for the past years. She and her husband, David Weener, have two daughters, Lori and Cindy, who are now students in the school which their grandmother has served for so many years.

To Appear In Concert At Organ Hall

Trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle.
Michelangelo

Marilyn Stulken

The summer organ series at Methuen Memorial Music Hall continues with a recital by Marilyn Stulken on Wednesday, Sept. 5, at 8:30 p.m.

Stulken, a native of Hastings, Nebraska, holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Hastings College and a Master of Music and Doctor of Musical Arts degrees from the Eastman School of Music. Presently director of music at Trinity Lutheran Church, Kenosha, Wisc., she has taught at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and has given numerous lectures, workshops, organ recitals and hymn festivals in the midwest, south and on the east coast. Stulken is author of "Hymnal Companion to the Lutheran Book of Worship, 1961" and her articles and journals have appeared in many musical journals.

Her selections for this program are: Suite du Deuxieme Ton, Louis-Nicolas Clerambault; Two Pieces, Domenico Zipoli; Deuxime fantaisie, Jehan Alain; Chants d'oiseaux, Olivier Messiaen, and Sonata in F, Op. 65. No. 1, Felix Mendelssohn.

The Methuen Memorial Music Hall and its great organ continues to serve as a renowned civic and cultural center due to the vision and efforts of a group of Methuen citizens who raised funds in 1946 and incorporated as a non-profit organization to acquire and preserve this building with its beautiful Baroque ornamentation and its magnificent musical instrument.

The Music Hall is located on Broadway (Route 28), just south of the square.

Thomas Murray will present an organ concert for the benefit of the Methuen Memorial Music Hall Scholarship Fund on Wednesday, Sept. 12.

YOUR HOME IS A CREDIT TO YOU -when you have an Equity Reserve account.

Write a check for up to $100,000 to finance almost anything. That's Equity Reserve. Now your credit's not only good; it's great.

Bank of New England-Bay State takes the equity you've built up in your home and makes it work for you. Use it to invest. Pay off an old debt. Back an education. Or take advantage of those rare opportunities that come your way.

How much is your home worth? We'll appraise it, subtract any mortgages owed, and make credit available for up to 75% of the difference. Use as much as you need, when you need it. The rate you pay varies monthly and is the prime rate published in The Wall Street

Journal on our last business day of each month, plus 1 1/2%. And you can repay as little as 2% per month. Of course, if you never use it, you're never charged.

At Bank of New England-Bay State, borrowing on your Equity Reserve Credit is as simple as writing a check. Or get a cash advance through your New England Banker card. Either way, Equity Reserve is the most up-to-date money management tool there is.

If you're a homeowner, you can apply for an Equity Reserve account at any office of Bank of New England or send in the coupon below.

Once you've got it, you've got it made.

Receives Award

Donald Gammon of Andover, founder and president of The Greenery, Cambridge, is shown receiving a national landscape award from First Lady Nancy Reagan in the Rose Garden at the White House. Gammon's award from American Association of Nurserymen, was for his design and installation of an atrium garden in a Cambridge Research Institute. It was the only interior landscape design recognized during the recent White House ceremonies.

To Enter Wellesley College

Nine area women will enter Wellesley College as freshmen this fall. They were recently honored by the Haverhill-Andover Wellesley Club with a pool party at the home of Mrs. Patricia Snedeker, Andover. Shirley Griffin, president of the club, and Mrs. Sheila Segal of Andover, area admissions representative, greeted recent graduates, undergraduates and new students.

Members of the class of 1988 are Kathy Koh, Catherine Merrill, Lynne Pinkney, Elizabeth Thomann, Angela Thompson, all of Andover; Manisha Patel, North Andover; Kathleen Stacy, Methuen; Lynne Harrold, Boxford; and Nancy Brown, Byfield.

Concert Rehearsals To Begin

The North Parrish Choral Society, a community choral group, will begin rehearsals for its 15th annual Christmas concert to be held December 8.

The concert will feature Hayden's "Missa Solemnis" in B flat major along with traditional and unusual Christmas carols.

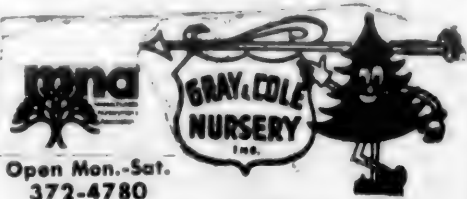

The society invites singers for all voice parts to become members. The first rehearsal will be held at Sanborn School, Lovejoy Road, Andover, on Wednesday, Sept. 12, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. No auditions will be required.

For more information, call or write Debbie Feeney, 31 Nassau Ave., Wilmington, MA 01887.

Sen. McGovern Seeks Re-Election

Sen. Patricia McGovern

State Senator Patricia McGovern (D-Second Essex and Middlesex) has announced that she will seek re-election for a third term in the Massachusetts Senate.

Sen. McGovern stated, "During the past four years, I have had the opportunity to represent the interests of the residents of Andover. It has been invigorating and I am looking forward in serving this community for another two years as its state senator."

During her four years in the senate, McGovern has been active in the passage of many new laws. This year she received the Massachusetts Bar Association's Legislator of the Year award for her outstanding efforts to improve the criminal justice system. "It is quite an honor for me to receive such an award because it comes from the practitioners within the criminal justice system," she stated.

Since the creation of the Joint Committee on Criminal Justice in 1980, McGovern has been its chair. Her major achievements have been the enactment of a bill of rights for victims and witnesses of crimes; penalties for drunk driving; making the crime of kidnapping a felony; one-day juror system which is now in effect in Middlesex, Suffolk and Essex counties; protection of persons and their property from vandalism and intimidation because of their ethnic background; and closing the loopholes in the minimum mandatory sentencing of drug dealers.

McGovern has been instrumental in assuring that Andover receives considerable amounts of local aid. She has been involved with state, local and business officials in trying to solve the traffic problems in the Lowell Junction area of Andover.

In looking to the future, McGovern explained, "My priorities for the town of Andover are to continue to support the continued economic and social growth of the community and to work with Andover's local officials to meet the goals of the town."

McGovern also serves as a member on the Senate's Post Audit and Oversight Committee, the Joint Committee on Government Regulations and she has the distinction of being the first woman to be seated on the Senate committee on the Judiciary. She is also a member of the Governor's Statewide Anti-Crime Council.

Observing Tenth Anniversary

The Andover School of Ballet is ten years old this September, says director Mara Meir. "In the summer of 1974 I was looking for a location for my ballet school. I drove into Andover and fell in love with this town. After visiting realtors and talking to people, I made my decision and opened my school in September."

Meir was raised in Palestine. She began her classical ballet training at the age of five and continued studying until she was eligible for military duty. After serving in the Army during the War of Independence, she became the first prima ballerina of the new state of Israel.

Later, she moved to Paris, France, where she studied under such great teachers as Mme Preobrajenska, Kniaseff, Mme Rosanne and Mme Egorova, all formerly of the Maryinsky Theatre of Russia. Her classmates included Leslie Caron, Bridgete Bardot, Zizi Jeanmaire, Roland Petit, Violette Verdy and Margot Fonteyn.

Meir danced with several concert companies which toured all over Europe until 1964 when she came to the United States for a visit and stayed. In 1967 she opened the Marblehead School of Ballet which she ran for five years and then sold to one of her adult students. The Marblehead School is still in operation today.

Meir sums up her career thusly, "In my 22 years of teaching I've learned to adapt the system of classical ballet training to the needs of my students. I've taught ballet to hundreds of children and adults from Andover and the Merrimack Valley. My students are mostly college oriented; they have various interests and even though they love ballet, they have other priorities, so my obligation is to encourage whatever their wishes for the future are, but also to inspire them to stick with ballet so they get the technique to enable them to dance in college if they decide they wish to do so."

"I have my rewards," she says. "When my five year olds draw cards that say 'Ballet is fun' and 'To my best ballet teacher,' my 12 year olds put on their first pair of point shoes and are in heaven, my teenagers come to me and say 'I am really into ballet now.' What more can a ballet teacher ask for?"

Volunteer Program At Hospital

Men and women interested in becoming hospital volunteers are encouraged to attend a program in Lawrence General Hospital's Kurth Auditorium on Wednesday, Sept. 12, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Volunteers are needed more than ever to provide many new and interesting services planned for this fall. Come and learn everything you need to know to become a volunteer at Lawrence General. Give a little of yourself and gain a lot—the satisfaction of helping those in need, meeting new friends, learning new skills and doing something special for yourself.

Complimentary lunch is included in the program. Preregistration is necessary. Register by calling the volunteer office between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Parenting Courses

Miriam G. Smith, an educational therapist in North Andover, will offer two parenting courses beginning in September.

"Systematic Training for Effective Parenting is an intensive nine-week training course geared to parents of toddlers to pre-adolescents. S.T.E.P. teaches positive, healthy methods for developing skills for listening, resolving conflicts, disciplining, fostering a sense of responsibility, independence and self-reliance."

"Systematic Training for Effective Parenting of Teens," a 10-week course for parents of pre-teens through adolescence, deals with such issues as developing effective communication skills between parents and teens, developing skills for listening, resolving conflicts, For more information, contact Miriam Smith, 29 Buckingham Road, North Andover.

Kelly-Cromie

Janet E. Cromie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Cromie of 106 Abbot St., Andover, was married to Kevin Kelly, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kelly of 276 Moore St., Chicopee, on August 18 at South Congregational Church, Andover.

Rev. Dr. Westy Egmont of South Church officiated at the three o'clock ceremony.

The bride, escorted down the aisle by her father, wore a family gown of ivory satin, trimmed with lace and pearls. The bridal gown was made by the bride's great-grandmother, and was worn by both her grandmother and her mother.

Marcia Cromie of Diamond Bar, Calif., the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor. She wore a skirt of pale blue with a white blouse, fashioned in the style of the same period as the bride's gown.

Thomas Kelley of Springfield, the groom's brother, was best man. Richard Cromie of Diamond Bar, Calif., the bride's brother, and John Kelly of Springfield, the groom's brother, served as ushers.

A reception was held following the ceremony at Osgood Hill in North Andover.

The bride is a graduate of Andover High School and Mount Holyoke College. She earned a master of education degree at Indiana University, and is employed as director of undergraduate admission at Lesley College in Cambridge.

Her husband is a graduate of Cathedral High School, Springfield, and Western New England College. He is employed as assistant director of admission at Boston University.

Following a wedding trip to the Maine coast, the couple will reside in West Newton.

Miss Webb Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Webb of 65 Woburn St., Andover, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Debra, to James R.W. Folley, the son of Mrs. Bertha K. Folley of 75 Essex St., Andover, and the late Herbert R. Folley.

Miss Webb is a graduate of Andover High School and Sylvania Tech. The president of Creations of AmaJen-Ation, Andover, she is self-employed as a jewelry designer and pearl restringer.

Her fiancé is a graduate of the Greater Lawrence Regional Vocational Technical High School, and of the Volkswagen-Porsche Training School, Germany. He served with the U.S. Army from 1970 to 1973 with the rank of sergeant. He is employed as a mechanic with the U.S. Post Office in Lawrence.

An October wedding is planned.

September Brunch Planned

The Andover Christian Women's Club invites all area women to attend its monthly brunch Thursday, Sept. 13, at the Andover Country Club, 60 Canterbury Lane, from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Free nursery provided at the Andover Bible Chapel, 266 Lowell St., Andover.

The program will include Judith Shea, image consultant of Color I Associates, Inc., Jan Boole, guest speaker from Bolton, and a special music presentation.

Reservations are necessary and may be placed until September 6 with Mrs. R. Charnagne 13 Marie Drive, Andover.

Films

The Museum of Our National Heritage, Lexington, will show two documentary films for the Labor Day holiday weekend. "With Babies and Banners" tells the story of nine women involved in the General Motors sit-down strike of 1937. Using documentary scenes of the strike and the everyday life of working women during the 1930s, the problems they faced at home, on the job and in the union. "With Babies and Banners" will be shown Saturday, Sept. 1, at 11 a.m., Sunday, Sept. 2, at 3 p.m. and Monday, Sept. 3, at 2 p.m.

"The Inheritance" documents the U.S. labor movement in the 20th century and traces the long, bitter struggle of workers against economic exploitation. The film will be shown Saturday, Sept. 1, at 2 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 2, at 2 p.m. and Monday, Sept. 3, at 11 a.m. Admission is free.

Illusion is the first of all pleasures.

Technicians Graduate At LGH

Christine Plummer of Andover is congratulated by her instructors, Debra Ralls (left) and Andre Belanger as she completed her studies in radiologic science at Lawrence General Hospital.

Lawrence General Hospital (LGH) recently graduated its 42nd class in radiologic technology.

Suzanne Doucot, Peter Farhadian, both of Methuen, Christine Plummer of Andover and Jim Passmore of Lawrence were honored by members of the radiology staff upon attainment of their Associate degrees in Radiologic Science. The students had completed their studies in the 24-month program offered by Northern Essex Community College in cooperation with Lawrence General Hospital. During the two years, including breaks and vacations, the students spent half of their time at the hospital to gain their clinical experience and the other half at the college. The technical studies of the radiologic technology program are closely interwoven with the LGH experience.

The new graduates will take the National Board examination, the successful completion of which will award them the distinction of recognition as Registered Radiologic Technologist.

Even before their exam, Peter Farhadian and Suzanne Doucot have located employment at Boston City and Somerville hospitals, respectively. Christine Plummer will be at Winchester Hospital while Jim Passmore will travel west before seeking a position.

Debra Ralls, R.T.R., educational coordinator of the radiology staff and the students' clinical instructor, notes, "Lawrence General has been providing radiologic training for over 40 years. Since 1942, first independently, later in conjunction with Northeastern University and since 1971 in cooperation with Northern Essex Community College. Our students are given excellent training using our new sophisticated equipment (much of which is not available elsewhere in the area) including a Franklin Head Unit, Polytome Room, Special Procedures Room with Digital Subtraction, as well as clinical experience in CAT scanning and ultrasound."

An interesting point of information, continues Ralls, "of the 26 radiology technicians employed at LGH, 13 received their clinical training here." Ralls is a 1978 graduate of the Northern Essex Community College/Lawrence General Hospital program.

Hazardous Waste Disposal Scheduled

For the second time Andover is sponsoring a hazardous waste pick-up, set for Saturday, Sept. 22, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., in the West Junior High School parking lot, Shawsheen Road.

A number of household cleaners are not safe to throw out each week with the trash, explained Everett F. Penny, Andover's health director. If enough oil-base paints, pesticides and insecticides, outdated medicines, and flammable wastes make their way to the Pelham, N. H., landfill where Andover's trash is dumped they may eventually seep into the ground water, he said.

A budget of $2,500 has been set aside for the waste collection, said Penny, which he thinks should cover the costs of hiring Recycling Industries, Inc., of Braintree to come in and collect the hazardous material.

Recycling Industries sorts the collected goods at their Braintree warehouse and then ships the various materials to disposal sites all around the country. Jeff Dill, a chemist with the company, said last spring the paint collected in Andover was sent to a chemical landfill in Niagara Falls and pesticides traveled to an incinerator in Chicago.

At the collection, which is also sponsored by the Andover League of Women Voters and Andover recycling, residents may leave one pound of two gallons of liquids for free, said Penny. Anything more will require residents to pay a $2 user fee to drop off their waste, he added.

Informational folders listing the substances that should not be left out for the trash or dumped down the drain may be picked up at the Memorial Hall Library, Town Hall or at the recycling center at Bartlet and Park Streets.

Building Vandalism On Rise; Cost In Excess Of $46,000

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Acts of vandalism against Andover school buildings — demonstrations, perhaps, of misplaced anger — have cost the town more than $46,000 in the past 16 months, and the cost continues to rise.

Doherty Junior High School has been struck most frequently by vandals, according to a report recently completed by the Municipal Maintenance department, but repairs at Andover High School have proved the most costly at more than $20,000.

West Junior High School and the high school follow Doherty as vandals' favorite targets; the Bancroft and South elementary schools have been more occasional ones.

The report chronicles 210 reports of vandalism at those five schools in total, and a total cost of $46,536 to repair the damages. The cost of broken glass alone at the schools adds up to $16,198.

When Town Manager Kenneth Mahony submitted the vandalism report to the selectmen earlier this month, the board conceded that there is little they can do to stop meaningless property damage at the schools. Police patrols and alarm systems rarely stop vandals from hurling rocks through windows, Selectman Gerald Silverman said: "There's no way the police can handle that."

Selectmen Chairman Donn Byrne said he was concerned about the "tremendous amount of money" drained from the town budget each year to repair what vandals have damaged. But the town manager said last week that what is more "disturbing" to him is the motivation behind the vandalism.

"Obviously we'd like to be able to spend that money somewhere else," Mahony said. "But what's most disturbing about this is that it's a sign of anger, of someone who's out of control. The person involved needs help."

At Bancroft and South schools in particular, the only two elementary schools that have had a problem with vandalism, the manager believes repeated incidents may be the work of the same people.

Sometimes vandals are content to throw rocks through windows; sometimes they break in and destroy whatever they can inside a school. Vandals have ripped thermostats off the walls, for example, and have thrown a shot put through a locker room wall, the manager said. Damage to toilet bowls is common, and vandals often cause water damage by forcing toilets to back up.

Mahony said it is difficult to judge whether vandalism has increased in recent years. Municipal Maintenance Director Joseph Dion began compiling statistics on the problem when his department was created last year, the manager said, and that's when Andover officials first "became aware" of the scope of the problem.

School Superintendent Kenneth Seifert said this week that he has asked Dion for more detailed information than the report provides, "a more specific breakdown" on the damages. Without that information, the superintendent said, it is "rather difficult" for him to judge whether vandalism is on the rise in Andover.

But Seifert added that he does not believe the problem is in fact increasing. "Glass breakage through the years has been the biggest problem," he noted. "Breaking and entering I assume is constant." There is also, he said, "a need for more definition — are we talking about vandalism? Or are we in some cases talking about deferred maintenance, normal wear and tear?"

The school department has attempted to fight vandalism in recent years by subtracting the cost of repairs from student activity funds — with the idea that peer pressure would deter vandals. But that plan was abandoned because it merely punished all students for the actions of a few, the superintendent said.

Anger may be one motivation behind vandalism, Seifert said, but it is not the only one: "Some of it is just out-and-out property destruction. When things come easy, the respect for property is not a high one. It's easy come, easy go, things are temporary. The sense of personal responsibility is declining."

Many young vandals, too, are aware that town officials are "more concerned about their anger than about the property damage," he added. "Kids know this." The fact that the courts have "no appropriate tool" to use against vandals — nothing between a prison sentence, which seems too harsh to most judges, or sending them home — means there's nothing to back up the town's efforts to curb the problem, he concluded.

From April 11 to Nov. 30, 1983, and from Jan. 1 to June 1 of this year, vandalism has been reported 90 times at Doherty Junior High on Bartlet Street. Repairing the results of vandalism on the plumbing, heating and electrical system at Doherty has cost 234 personnel hours and $3,233. Repairing damage to other parts of the building has cost 139 hours and $1,807, for a total of $5,041 worth of damage at the junior high school.

At Andover High on Shawsheen Road, during the same period, 40 reports of vandalism translated into 276 hours and $6,610 worth of plumbing/heating/electrical repairs, and 401 hours and $13,503 worth of repairs to the rest of the building — including, during 1983, $6,750 for repairs to 450 lockers. Total cost of vandalism at AHS: $20,113.

West Junior High on Shawsheen Road has suffered 61 incidents of vandalism during the past 16 months. Plumbing/electrical/heating repairs at that school have cost Andover 36 hours and $917; other building repairs have cost 153 hours and $3,124. Total cost: $4,041.

Vandals have struck Bancroft on Bancroft Road 10 times during the reported period. Repairs for plumbing, heating and electricity have cost $535 and required 21 hours; other repairs have cost $366 and required 34 hours.

South School on Woburn Street has been vandalized three times, according to the report, at a cost of 10 hours and $100 for building repairs, five hours and $140 for plumbing/heating/electrical repairs.

In addition, the manager said West Junior High and Bancroft suffered extensive damage, most of it broken windows, one weekend earlier this month, after the Municipal Maintenance report was filed.

Two schools have escaped vandalism: West elementary school on Beacon Street and Sanborn elementary school on Lovejoy Road. The report includes no incidents at Shawsheen School on Ann's Lane, which has been serving as school administrative offices but will become an early childhood education center next month.

Renovations at the former East Junior High, now town and school offices, have not attracted vandals, Mahony said — rather surprisingly, since that building adjoins the hard-hit Doherty Junior High.

Construction at EJH, however, has inspired graffiti artists, the manager added. Graffiti occurs frequently enough in Andover that Municipal Maintenance has invested in a small sandblasting machine to erase spray-painted sentiments from public buildings.

Acting Principal Appointed

Bancroft School third grade teacher Delores Pelc has been appointed acting principal at the Bancroft Road elementary school until a principal is chosen from the 49 persons who have applied for the post.

Although she hopes to have a new principal in Bancroft's front office by the start of school on Thursday, Sept. 6, Assistant Superintendent Lois Haslam told THE TOWNSMAN she isn't sure the interviewing will be completed by then. Haslam appointed Pelc, who lives on Carmel Road in Andover, to fill the slot the assistant superintendent left to accept her new position in June. Haslam said Pelc has not applied for the principal's job.

Interviews with the potential candidates began this week with interviews scheduled on Monday, Tuesday and today. Haslam, who is heading up the screening committee, said she hopes the group will have a list of 18 to 19 semifinalists at the end of the week. The names of those who have applied for the job, which carries a salary of from $33,000 to $38,000, will not be publicized until a final list of hopefuls has been made. These persons will then interview with Superintendent Kenneth R. Seifert who will make a recommendation for the appointment at Bancroft to the School Committee.

Participating on the screening committee are parent members Barbara Brown and Laura Butt, school principals Joseph Normandy, of South Elementary School and John E. Coyle, from West Elementary School, instructional specialists Jane Markiewicz from South and Nancy Smith from Sanborn Elementary School. Bancroft teachers Bonnie Guerin and Barbara Raulston, fine arts program advisor Diana Kolben and reading program advisor Dorothy Sipsey and Janis Baron, the gifted and talented coordinator.

New Programs, New Ideas Greet Beginning Of A New School Year

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Going back to school in September is always new, every year, for every student — even the most self-assured high school senior. Each new school year draws students into the new experiences, new tribulations, new triumphs that only that year could bring.

But next week, Andover's youngest public school students, the kindergartners, will do something truly new, something no one in this town has ever done before them. They'll all start their school careers together, in one building: the Shawsheen School, in its own new role as an all-town early childhood education center.

The Shawsheen center will put a new face on early childhood education in Andover, School Superintendent Kenneth Seifert predicts, and he notes that it will be the focus of a great deal of attention from the School Committee and school department during the coming year.

Other new ideas and new programs, too, are in store for students throughout the school system: programs that will involve youngsters in cable television, computers, writing and thinking in new ways.

They'll see a few new faces among school administrators as well — two assistant superintendents instead of one, for instance, and a new principal at Bancroft School.

The new school year starts next Thursday, Sept. 6. The academic day will run from 7:30 a.m. to 2:05 p.m. for secondary school students, and from 8:45 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. for elementary school students. Early childhood center students will meet in two sessions, attending either mornings (8:45 to 11:15 a.m.) or afternoons (12:15 to 2:45 p.m.)

"For incoming students, new students in the system, the early childhood center will really make a tremendous contribution," Dr. Seifert says. "We'll have a team of people now, instead of people in multiple schools, working very closely and sharing information."

This new team approach to teaching at the Shawsheen should help teachers group and re-group kindergarten and readiness students, with "much better" results than individual kindergarten and readiness classes in each elementary school have ever allowed, he says.

What's more, Dr. Seifert hopes the new center will help teachers work more closely with parents, to carry early childhood education from the school to the home. "General plans for the center include assisting parents in raising these young children," he explains.

The superintendent envisions, for example, a local cable television program developed by the school department's media specialists to help parents "get more out of" a favorite family pastime, reading to their children. A "story hour" program, he says, could give parents new ideas for reading to their little ones — ideas, say, on how to question the child about a story.

Cable television will really come into its own in the schools this year, Dr. Seifert emphasizes, with Andover High School's cable television studio in full operation. He hopes to see students working behind the scenes on production crews, and in front of the camera as announcers and news commentators as well.

A school news program is "definitely" planned for the high school, and that idea might well be expanded to the junior highs and elementary schools ("This is the Doherty Junior High Evening News...").

Access to cable television service, provided by Rollins Cablevision, will let the schools have programs "piped in directly to the school system," the superintendent says, and broadcast programs of community interest to the town's cable television subscribers, too.

All of these "potentially exciting" possibilities will fall under the full-time supervision of a just-hired school administrator, television coordinator Jake Edmund. With its potential to teach both the technical and on-air aspects of television, the schools' cable TV program offers "a very fertile field for students coming along," Dr. Seifert concludes.

Also new to the administration: computer resource teacher Jarilyn Parla. She will offer in-service training to teachers, the superintendent says, and begin introducing new computer-assisted instructional programs into the classroom at all grade levels.

Parla will research available computer software programs in math, science or social studies, for instance, that can be related to textbook studies; in the past, "there might have been a teacher here, a teacher there" engaged in that kind of research, Dr. Seifert says.

In addition, the computer resource teacher will work on recommendations for Phase Two of the school department's three-phase program for purchasing computer equipment. (Town meeting approved that program last year, the superintendent says, but school officials opted to delay launching the second phase until they had a full-time computer resource staffer in the system.)

Each school now has at least eight computers, acquired under Phase One, but that's simply not enough to meet the demands of hundreds of students in each school, Dr. Seifert says.

It's likely that parents may soon be helping their children make the most of those computers by volunteering to work with pupils in after-school and evening "computer labs" — something that's been practiced with great success at West Junior High for the past two years. "We see more of that happening," the superintendent comments.

Besides expanded computer instructional programs, secondary students will return to a new, "much more personal approach" to writing instruction this year, the administrator notes. Four teachers, working as an inter-disciplinary team, learned the new teaching technique this summer at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

The program emphasizes "much more of a coaching arrangement, with more immediate feedback," than Andover teachers have employed in the past, Dr. Seifert says — adding that he is "particularly impressed" with the teachers who are participating. They include two English teachers, one foreign language teacher and one fine arts teacher. All will use their new ideas on writing instruction in their classes.

Another educational conference held at Harvard University in Cambridge this summer has led to a pilot program at West Junior High, which will be under the direction of WJH Principal William Hart.

Several administrators attended that conference on critical thinking, a skill on which many American educators are placing new emphasis. The pilot program will let Andover develop "strategies" for teaching this discipline, according to the superintendent.

Interested in seeing new ideas flowing through Andover's schools, the School Committee has budgeted funds to encourage new program development this year — and the administration has found 27 new programs, each proposed by school staffers, worthy of funding. (The proposals will range in cost from about $188 to $3,100.)

At the elementary schools, these will include a month of visits to South School by a muralist artist-in-residence, who will work with students to create a mosaic mural or series of murals; and an attempt to weave the language arts comprehension objectives of the AIRS reading program into the social studies curriculum. (The latter will be field-tested in a third-grade independent language arts class.)

And at the secondary schools, new programs under development will include a course on television journalism, covering writing, editing and production; and a quarterly review of the ninth-grade science program, with the focus on planning new teaching strategies and finding new ways to monitor students' progress.

Major administrative personnel changes are ahead this year, most notably the division of the assistant superintendent's duties into two assistant positions, one for elementary and one for secondary education.

While former Bancroft School principal Lois Haslam is already at work as the elementary assistant superintendent, the secondary assistant's position remains vacant. Dr. Seifert says applications for the job will be accepted until Sept. 1 — and he is determined to hire his new assistant as quickly as possible.

"The impact (of creating two assistant superintendent positions) should be a very positive one," he says. "There's really been a need to pull the instructional program together, and I think the two assistant superintendents will be able to pull together kindergarten through grade twelve. I'm very optimistic about that."

Dr. Seifert says he believes the two new administrators will have more time to devote to curriculum development than one assistant superintendent and an oft-changing staff of program advisors have had in past years.

At times, he says, "program continuity has been less than satisfactory." Under the new organization, "clearly the responsibility for instruction rests more squarely on the shoulders of the assistant superintendents, and the principals."

Lois Haslam's promotion has left the Bancroft principalship to be filled, and the superintendent says he is interviewing candidates for that position this week. His target date for welcoming the new elementary school principal aboard is Sept. 15.

Another administrative position has also been split into two this year: the physical education department program advisor position. With the School Committee's approval, that post has been divided into an advisor responsible for physical education and intramural athletics, and another responsible for interscholastic sports.

This split will have "a better impact" on each part of the program, Dr. Seifert says. Both positions have yet to be filled.

The School Committee has its own goals for the 1984-85 academic year, and the superintendent says they are solid ones. Among the objectives outlined in a "direction letter" to be sent home to parents: development of a three-year financial plan and a three-year curriculum review plan, implementation of a quality assurance program throughout the system, and a review of diploma requirements.

School officials also hope to the review the performance of the secondary schools, consider the future possibility of a middle school in Andover — and keep a close watch over the Shawsheen early childhood center.

Some things, this fall, remain the same: lunch prices will stay at 75 cents in all schools, Dr. Seifert says. User fees for instrumental music lessons stay at last year's rate, $50 per student per activity, with a $65 maximum for each family; athletic user fees will stay at $20 per student per after-school sport, with a $35 maximum fee per student and a $50 maximum per family.

The superintendent's September outlook, too, remains the same. His attitude is positive — how, he asks, could it be otherwise? "It doesn't do anybody any good to focus on the BooBirds, the ones who're always saying, 'Boo, boo, it isn't gonna work,'" he explains. "We can't afford to emotionally identify with the BooBirds."

"I feel very privileged to work with some of the people I work with," Dr. Seifert says quietly. "These are people filled with energy, vitality, commitment."

"There is an enthusiasm. The students and staff are upbeat — they have always been upbeat. I think we're alive and well."

*Our best wishes to students in Andover
For a very successful '84 -'85 school year.*

Administrators' Workshops Are More Extensive

Back-to-school workshops for Andover's public school administrators will be more extensive and in-depth because of the reorganization of the administrators, said Assistant Superintendent Lois Haslam.

Principals from the five elementary schools, two junior high schools, Andover High School and the Early Childhood Education Center at the Shawsheen School will take part in the meetings which began on Monday and run through tomorrow as will program advisors, instructional specialists and other administrators. Haslam and Kenneth R. Seifert, superintendent of schools, are leading most of the workshops, said Haslam.

The assistant superintendent said one of the most exciting presentations of the week was a lecture by educational futurist Christopher Dede, a professor from the University of Houston who is at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for six months. As a futurist, Haslam explained that Dede projects what changes may be expected in education as a result of innovations in economy, technology and society. Dede was at the school administration building all day yesterday meeting with groups of administrators.

Andover's public school teachers will return to school next Tuesday, Sept. 4 for two days of training before the students arrive on Thursday, Sept. 6.

West School Opening Day

* On the first day of school (September 6), all students should report to the following locations at West Elementary.

Grade 1 - Middle door on playground side of school

Grade 2 - Rear door on hot-topped side of school

Grade 3 - Middle door on hot-topped side of school (right)

Grade 4 - Middle door on hot-topped side of school (left)

Grade 5 - First door on hot-topped side of school

Grade 6 - Main entrance on Beacon Street

Students at each grade level will be met by teaching team and homeroom lists will be called.

New students should report to school office between 8:30 and 8:45 a.m.

In case of rain, students should report to following areas: Grade 1 - cafeteria; grades 2 and 3 - auditorium; grades 4 and 5 - directly to Pod B; grade 6 - old gym.

Helping A Child Get The Most Out Of School

(Editor's Note: The following was compiled by Andover West Junior High school in cooperation with the Parents Advisory Council there and the National Education Association)

Plenty of rest and physical exercise, as well as a balanced diet, are necessary for your child's well-being. Schedule a complete physical examination with your child's doctor at least once a year, and be sure your child's eyesight and hearing are checked.

See that your child maintains regular attendance at school. It is far more difficult to make up work than keep up day by day.

See that adequate time and a quiet space are set aside for doing assignments.

Provide your child with as much equipment for studying as you can reasonably afford. He'll need a desk or free table on which he can spread his work. His reference library should contain at least a dictionary and perhaps encyclopedias, a thesaurus, and an atlas.

Check whether your child received assignments and that they are done neatly and on time. Make a special point of doing this early in the school year, and at the beginning of each term, to start good homework habits. Homework is an obligation he has to his school and himself, and should be his own responsibility.

Emotional Requirements

First and most important, you can help your child see himself as someone who CAN succeed. Teach him that one setback is not the end of the world and that, with a little effort, he can bounce right back. Praise your child's successes. Emphasize his strong points - whatever they are - as evidence of his abilities.

Try to maintain an atmosphere at home that is relaxed. A certain amount of pressure is an essential part of motivation for learning, but do not pressure him to achieve beyond his abilities.

Maintain open lines of communication. Just by being there to talk - and to listen - you can improve your child's emotional environment for learning. To communicate, you must listen, and to listen to a child, you must be patient. Show an interest in things of great concern to your child.

Help your child lead a balanced life. He needs to devote the time to his studies and to recreational and social activities to develop his total personality.

Your child may - even unwittingly - do poor work just to get the attention it brings. While praise is a stronger motivator than reproof, he'll seek any kind of recognition rather than none. Your genuine appreciation of genuine accomplishments can spur your child to greater achievement.

Finally, if you have any complaints about the school, take them to the school and not to your child. Complaining to your child may only undermine his confidence in the school. Appropriate members of the school staff can tell you why certain policies exist and can change them if your comments show a need for change.

Intellectual Requirements

Make a realistic appraisal of your child's abilities. If necessary, talk to school personnel to help you determine his potentialities. Then set academic goals for and with your child that are within his reach.

Stimulate your child intellectually from the very beginning of his life. There is overwhelming evidence that a child's attitude toward learning are largely formed before he ever enters a classroom. Stimulate a love for reading early in life.

Throughout your child's school career, always keep school work in perspective. Show that it is the most important thing he is doing during his growing up years. Respect his study time by not interrupting or distracting him and by keeping down the noise. His daily schedule should include time for family responsibilities and certain chores, as well as time to complete all school assignments.

Discuss your child's assignments with him, but don't do them. It's his pursuit of learning, not yours. However you can offer suggestions and point out sources of information. Large projects, especially, are just more fun when there is someone with whom to discuss them, someone who watches the progress with interest.

Encourage your child to develop interests related to his academic subjects to enrich his education. Take vacations to historic sites. Discuss the news events you watch together on television. Start him with a library of books recommended by the school or the public library. Give him a gift of his own magazine subscription.

Use every opportunity to show your child the relationship between school subjects and life. His responsibilities should become more complex as he learns and matures, and his interest is less likely to flag when he can see the point of learning.

You are vitally important to your child's pursuit of learning. You provide the physical, emotional, and intellectual foundation on which he builds his desire to learn. You create the home environment that encourages your child to get all he can out of school.

If any suggestion could summarize them all, it is, "BE INTERESTED."

Your child must make the most of his education in order to live productively and happily in modern society. Education takes more than just sitting in school every day, doing to get by, and picking up a diploma at the end of the process. You can help your child to pursue a rich and meaningful education; to see the light of learning shed on his life; and to make the most of his years in school.

Andover School Bus Code

With the beginning of another school year, parents are urged to instruct their children in the contents of the Andover School Bus Code as adopted by the Andover School Committee.

Students who violate this code, violate the rights of other students on the bus and possibly subject these student to undue safety hazards. Everyone shares equally in the responsibility and safety on the school buses.

Students

1. Only authorized students may ride the bus.
2. Obey the driver in all matters pertaining to the operation of the school bus. The bus driver is the representative of parents and teachers and is directly responsible for the safety of each student on his bus.
3. Exercise courtesy towards others while loading, riding and leaving the bus.
4. Arrive at the bus stop on time and wait for the bus on the curb or shoulder off the road.
5. Cross highways and streets only in front of the bus. Move away from the front bumper of the bus approximately 6-8 feet so the bus driver can observe your crossing. Do not run or dash into street or roads without looking both ways even though the bus driver has traffic stopped.
6. Avoid trespassing on private property and being noisy.
7. Board the bus in an orderly manner when the bus has come to a full stop and the driver has opened the door.

8. Take your seat promptly and, if you must stand, grasp a seat bar firmly.

9. Assignment of seats is left to the discretion of the bus driver and/or school authority. However, if seat assignments are made, compliance is mandatory.

10. Remain seated until the bus comes to a full stop, then leave in an orderly manner.

11. Allow standees off first once the school bus has come to a full stop.

12. DO NOT TALK to the driver while the bus is in motion.

13. Avoid actions that might distract the driver and result in a serious accident.

14. Keep your voice low, no shouting, whistling, rough housing, pushing, fighting or throwing objects.

15. Do not extend arms or any other parts of your body out the windows. Do not throw any objects or spit out the bus windows.

16. Do not smoke on the bus.

17. Ask the driver's permission before opening the windows.

18. Help keep the bus clean and report anything damaged in the bus to the driver. Do not eat or chew gum on the bus.

19. Keep books/bundles out of the aisles and do not carry heavy objects on the bus that might cause injury to other students. If you carry small animals on the bus for school projects you are responsible for their containment while enroute to and from school.

20. Ride your assigned bus and do not ask the driver to make unauthorized stops unless written permission is received from your parent and agreement is reached between the principal and bus driver.

21. Report any violation of these rules to your bus proctor, the bus driver or your teacher.

22. Violation of the above rules may result in suspension of your bus-riding privilege.

Accident Procedure

1. Keep calm and follow the directions of the bus driver. Stay in your seat until the bus driver tells you what action to take.

A. Do not touch any emergency equipment until told by the driver.

B. In case of fire, leave the bus in an orderly manner and move to the nearest phone.

2. If the driver is injured and unable to move, notify the nearest adult or contact the police or fire department on the nearest phone.

3. Report any injuries to yourself or other students to the driver.

Parents

1. Instruct children on the content of the bus code.

Early Childhood Center To Be Ready For Thursday Opening

By Susan Rand

The knee-high chairs are being moved in from Andover's four elementary schools and the walls are receiving another coat of paint but school officials are certain that the new pint-sized classrooms at the Shawsheen School will be ready for 350 kindergarteners next Thursday, Sept. 6, on their first day of school.

The one time elementary school and then home of the town's school administrators has been transformed into a colorful learning center for the town's youngest students. It was last February when the School Committee approved the plan to locate three to six year old students at the 18-year-old school, which is located off Ann's Lane.

In much less than the year's time it usually takes to renovate a school some $200,000 appropriated at Town Meeting for work inside the Shawsheen has been spent to make the building child-sized once again. Superintendent Kenneth R. Seifert credited Linnea Gershenberg, who will head the school as early childhood coordinator; Town Manager Kenneth Mahoney and Gerry Dion, director of the town's municipal maintenance, as having gone the extra mile to make it possible to open the Shawsheen School this fall.

Seifert is hoping to turn back one-half of the cost of the school renovations to the town's general fund and has applied for reimbursement of $100,000 from the Massachusetts Department of Education. Many times as much as 65 percent of the cost to construct a school building is returned by the state, he said. A decision is not expected on the town's request until three months from now according to William Curley of the state's School Building Assistance Bureau, the board charged with deciding Andover's request.

With the number of kindergarteners a growing population in Andover the enrollment is up this fall by about 50 youngsters said Lois Haslam, who oversees elementary education as assistant superintendent. The children will be divided into 16 kindergarten classes, eight of which meet in the morning session and eight in the afternoon. There are also two readiness classes for children who are not yet prepared for first grade but have completed a year of kindergarten. This intermediate step has been a part of the Andover school system since 1979. An early childhood classroom is also planned for the Shawsheen where youngsters as young as three will benefit from early intervention which is designed to aid difficulties they may have with such skills as motor coordination or speaking. In the past the kindergarten classes have been at the Bancroft, Sanborn, South and West elementary schools.

The parents of the soon-to-be school children have been helpful with the details involved in readying the school for the first day, said Haslam. The most enthusiastic of parent groups, the kindergarten parents will be at Shawsheen next Thursday to help unload and load up the buses.

The Shawsheen students have been sent their bus assignments and teachers' names. Parents with questions about the first day of school should contact Gershenberg at the school department office in the new town building by calling 470-1700.

Easing Child's Anxiety About The First Day

Thousands of children are preparing to go back to school. Whether heading for grade school, junior high or high school, they are all about to experience both the excitement and apprehension of new beginnings.

For one group of children—those going to school for the first time—the transition from summertime to schooltime may not be a perfectly smooth one. And the first day or even several days of school for these youngsters may be marked by tears, upset stomachs or cases of "the jitters."

According to Kathryn Tolbert, Ph.D., associate in psychology at The Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, it is quite normal for first-timers to feel some anxiety about beginning school. "Most often, the anxiety is caused by the fear of being separated from a parent or parents," she says. "Unless they are veterans of day care or nursery school, it may be the first time that many of these children are spending a large block of time away from home. They may worry about their parents leaving and never coming back for them."

In addition to their own anxiety about starting school, children can sense the fears of others. "We often find that parents have anxiety about sending their children to school," says Dr. Tolbert. "Children have remarkable antennae that tune in to their parents' feelings. If parents are worried, children will sense it and become concerned as well."

According to Dr. Tolbert, there are many ways parents can help to prepare a child who is starting school for the first time. Among the most important is that parents "talk about the approaching school days in a positive way. For example," she says, "parents may let their child know how proud they are that he or she is old enough to go to school. Children love to anticipate an event they sense their parents are excited about."

Another way to prepare a child is to reduce the fear of the unknown. By providing as much information about school as possible, a child will feel more comfortable on the first day. A dry-run visit to the school building is one way to help a child imagine what school will be like. "If the school is located in the neighborhood," says Dr. Tolbert, "parents can take a trip to the school with their child. A rehearsal trip to school is also an ideal opportunity to initiate conversation about school activities. Parents can tell their child that school will be a place to meet new friends and learn how to do new things such as read, make numbers and play games," she says.

Parents can also help prepare children for school by changing their youngsters' daily schedule. "Schooltime means more structured activities than children are accustomed to," says Dr. Tolbert. "Beginning about a week before school starts, parents might consider slowly changing the content of their child's days. Earlier bedtimes and more structured and educational activities, such as a trip to a museum, may help the child make an easier transition."

Back-to-school rituals such as shopping for school clothes, shoes or even stationery supplies can help prepare a child for school. "It's not the quantity or price of the purchases that are important," says Dr. Tolbert. "Any small school-related items such as shoelaces, pencils or erasers will help make a child feel that starting school is a special occasion."

Even if school preparations have gone smoothly and a child seems to be looking forward to starting school, parents should not be surprised if, on the first day, anxiety sets in. Says Dr. Tolbert, "Parents should try to accompany their child to school on the first day, or at least arrange for someone familiar to the child, such as an older sibling or family friend, to do so."

According to Dr. Tolbert, most children who begin school for the first time have anxiety for just a few days. "If parents find that the anxiety lasts much longer or gets worse each day rather than better, they may consider seeking professional help."

St. Augustine's Enrollment Increases

By Susan Rand

St. Augustine's School administrators are attributing a jump in this year's school enrollment to the fact that area families are looking for the teaching of "values" for their children.

When the doors open at the 26 Central St. school on Thursday, Sept. 6, the first day of school, there will be 425 students at the Catholic school. That number is up 45 from last year, which also saw an increase in enrollment over the year previous. As of this week there are 25 students on a waiting list hoping to start school at St. Augustine's. There are classes for children from kindergarten through grade eight at the private school.

"We are seeing an increased interest in parochial education," explained administrative assistant Maxine Grogan. "People are looking for the teaching of values such as respect for individuals and community."

Teachers of the 17 classes at the school begin work on Tuesday, Sept. 4, with a special service at St. Augustine's Church. The next day the faculty will meet with the principal, Brother Thomas Schady.

Grogan said the ratio of teachers to students at the private school will be 22 students to each teacher. The largest class will be the eighth grade where there are 30 students enrolled. There is only one grade eight class at St. Augustine's this year. All other grades have two sections.

Parents may meet the school teachers at a coffee hour on the first day of school from 9 to 10:30 a.m., in the school cafeteria.

This year students will benefit from two new Apple computers in the computer room. The addition of a computer printer and LOGO program gives the school the best computer facilities in the district. The school will host a computer workshop at St. Augustine's for other parish members of the archdiocese.

The cost of an education at St. Augustine's differs for those who are members of the parish and those who are not. The tuition decreases for each child if more than one child in a family is enrolled at the school. Costs range from $575 for one child to attend St. Augustine's if the family is a member of the church. Non-members pay $750 to send one child. That cost jumps to $1,050 for three non-member children, three members pay a total of $875. School literature explains that the tuition pays for two thirds of the cost of educating St. Augustine's students. But if a family is unable to pay the full tuition at the school Grogan said that fee may be waived.

This year two of the 22 teachers are members of the Sisters of Notre Dame, a Catholic order of nuns most of whom are teachers. The other 20 teachers are lay persons. Principal Schady is a member of the Marist order. The priests at St. Augustine's church are members of the Augustinian order. Grogan said the mixing of three religious orders at St. Augustine's gives the school an interesting perspective. The declining numbers of persons entering vocations often forces schools and parishes to consolidate a number of different groups in their schools and churches, she said.

Student-authored Book Dispels Fears Of Entering Junior High

By Susan Rand

The most important "myth" a group of soon-to-be eighth graders tried to dispel for incoming seventh graders at Doherty Junior High school is that "hoods," short for hoodlums, do not wander around the school waiting for an opportunity to "dump" a new student's books.

A booklet composed of 14 handwritten letters from Doherty students, who have survived the first year at junior high, was sent along to the youngsters finishing sixth grade at the South Elementary School at the end of school in June. The creation of South School Principal Joseph Normandy, the 30-page yellow book, which has been written for students by students for the second year, grew out of an idea Normandy had to calm the fears of the students, and parents, leaving South for Doherty.

"When you are going from elementary school to junior high, or from junior high to high school for that matter, you hear all kinds of horror stories," explained Normandy. "I asked the students who finished their first year at the junior high to write down their experiences so (the soon-to-be seventh graders) wouldn't spend their summers with these grave concerns about terrible things."

Called "What every kid should know about Junior High 1984-85," the yellow bound book was "produced," or more accurately, photocopied, at the public school system's document center. Doherty English teacher Judith Rickley managed production of the booklet at Doherty, said Normandy. Contributing to the booklet were seventh graders Michelle Meli, Neil Fater, Heather Ryan, Sandy Ferris, Betsy Frankenger, Steffanie Wilson, Lori Hanning, Shiroba Bilwakesh, Chris Stout, Diane Bohaker, Stephen Gack, Trina Picardi, Tricia Novelline and David Manning.

Normandy said that he hopes someday it won't be necessary to send out a book to reassure young students adding that he intends to continue the project until word gets around that it isn't needed.

In their best handwriting the young authors tell about those first-day-of-school woes that worry any new student in a strange new, and much larger, school. Teachers, often described as "understanding" will allow five minutes as traveling time between classes, instead of the usual three minutes, for the first few weeks of school, wrote Diane Bohaker.

As for the older students, who the South School youngsters fear will taunt them as they make their way around a new building, Neil Fater tried to put the younger colleagues at ease in the first paragraph of his letter.

"What you hear about hoods hanging out in the bathroom waiting to beat you up is not true," Neil explained, "for one thing there are only a few hoods and they keep to themselves. Also, don't worry about your books being dumped. If your books were dumped, it was probably by one of your friends."

Practically everyone mentions "the hoods" in their letters. At one extreme Betsy Frankenger tells of worrying so much about the junior high school rumors that she thought she was going to faint. She counters, though, warning that "they're just trying to scare you."

Stephen Gack encourages, writing that teachers are in the halls to help the new students adding not to be afraid of "people dumping your books. Lastly don't be afraid of big guys beating you up," he wrote. David Manning acknowledges the future Doherty students have probably heard about the hoods, but, he rationalizes, "well, there's not many." In the book's longest letter, at four pages, Trina Picardi says that "you never get your books dumped and hardly ever get your locker shut." How reassuring!

The Doherty students also write about the mandatory classes that each seventh grader must take at their junior high, which they often refer to as D.J.H. There are math, science, social studies and English classes with an option to learn a language. And, they say, the work isn't all that bad. In fact a student just might end up enjoying an English book, wrote Trina Picardi.

"You may think that novels are bad and you'll always be behind," she explained, "but once you get into it and start talking about it (the novels, that is) you can't put it down."

They are very aware of their surroundings, these seventh graders. They call it their "beautiful new junior high," and one writer, Chris Stout, expounded on the physical environs.

"The school is clean," wrote Chris. "It is mostly carpeted. Some areas have tiles. You have a locker check every four months. The class rooms are clean. There are big enough seats to do your work on."

Stephen Gack provided some practical hints about getting to school on time. A bell rings each morning letting students know they are late at 7:40 a.m., he wrote

So the best way to make it to school on time is to leave yourself plenty of time in the morning.

"School starts at 7:35 so you should plan on getting up at 6 or 6:30 a.m.," suggested Stephen. "When you get to school you go to the back and wait to get in."

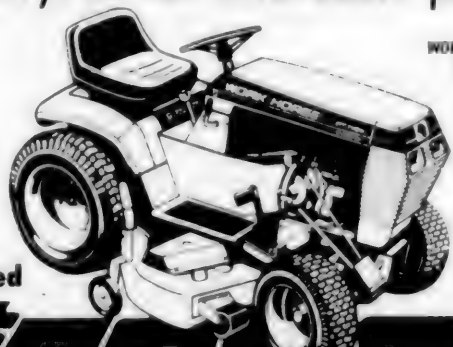

If the lack of "hoods," or an opportunity to play intramural sports, run for an office on the student council or attend one of the afternoon dances won't lure the South School students to Doherty the food just might.

Lunch time must rank as one of the highlights of a junior high schoolers day, especially at Doherty where Neil Fater said the daily fare was "excellent." Heather Ryan agreed, explaining that for the discriminating eaters there is a choice of a hot lunch, sub (submarine sandwich) or a salad. There are also the requisite potato chips, ice cream and fruit juices to choose from according to Heather.

But eating in school isn't just reserved for lunch. Michelle Meli wrote about cooking, one of her favorite subjects, where, she said "you and your group get to cook all different kinds of foods. And of course, you get to eat them."

Some of the South School alumni who will enter the Doherty Junior High for the first time next Thursday will at the very least have 14 new acquaintances they can thank for their helpful hints. And perhaps this spring a handful of those once-timid seventh graders will write to their friends back at South about the fun they had during their first year at D.J.H.

Graduation Standards Raised

More than 25 percent of Massachusetts Public High Schools have toughened their graduation requirements for the class of 1987, according to a survey released by the State Department of Education.

Massachusetts Commissioner of Education John H. Lawson explained that the main purpose of the survey was to collect basic information about high school graduation requirements for all students in the core subjects of English, mathematics, science, social studies and foreign language. The report describes the requirements for the class of 1984 and the changes which will affect the class of 1987.

According to Commissioner Lawson, the significant findings of the survey are:

97.2 percent of Massachusetts 9-12 high schools require more than three years of English. By 1987, all high schools will require four or more years of English.

71.2 percent of Massachusetts 9-12 high schools require at least two years of math. By 1987, 84.4 percent will require at least two years of math.

57.1 percent of Massachusetts 9-12 high schools require at least two years of science. By 1987, 71.3 percent will require at least two years of science.

No Massachusetts high school required coursework in foreign language for the graduating class of 1984. Three high schools will require a foreign language for the class of 1987.

The survey also found that there is no significant difference in graduation requirements among communities based on either wealth or per pupil expenditures. Small towns, according to the survey, have slightly higher average graduation requirements than big cities, industrial suburbs or residential suburbs.

Massachusetts, unlike most other states, has traditionally allowed local school districts to establish their own graduation requirements. Currently, state law mandates only a year of American history and four years of physical education for high school graduation. Only nine states allow local control of high school course requirements. Several of these states are considering changes that would shift control away from local districts. In total, according to the U.S. Department of Education, 48 states and the District of Columbia have recently adopted or are now considering changes in the course requirements for high school graduation.

Other important findings of the survey include:

Massachusetts vocational high schools have more stringent high school graduation requirements in English, math, science and social studies than the 9-12 academic high schools.

Only two high schools require computer competency/proficiency for graduation.

Twelve high schools require art, art/humanities, fine arts, fine/practical arts or music for graduation.

Of all the courses required for graduation in 9-12 high schools, an average of 9.4 course/years are specified in the four core academic areas.

Massachusetts high schools require about the same number of course/years in the core subjects as the rest of the country.

Lawson explained that this is the first comprehensive effort to collect such valuable data made in recent years. "The State Board of Education and I initiated this survey to better inform state policymakers and the public on the current debate before the State Legislature concerning H5704, the education reform legislation."

Lawson cautioned that, while this survey provides some important insights into the Massachusetts high school curriculum, it does not present a total picture of a high school education. "Because graduation requirements do not distinguish among courses with varying levels of difficulty, it does not necessarily mean that a high school with tougher requirements has a more rigorous curriculum," he said.

Lawson said that the department will release a massive study next spring about students' course-taking behavior during four years of high school which will give a more complete picture of a high school education. "We are investigating the actual courses and their level of difficulty taken by 3,000 randomly selected students who graduated this June."

Phys. Ed. Dept. Reorganized

Without spending so much as an extra penny the School Committee split the job of program advisor for physical education and athletics into two positions, one in charge of physical education and intramurals and the other overseeing interscholastic sports.

The committee's unanimous vote, at their Tuesday, Aug. 7 meeting, to reorganize the physical education department came with school Superintendent Kenneth R. Seifert's endorsement of the plan for the two new positions, which was authored by two men who have held the job.

Richard J. Bourdelais, a high school physical education teacher who was acting program advisor for physical education and athletics this past year, worked with Richard L. Swift, who permanently held the post but was on a leave of absence this past year, to create the reorganization plan.

The jobs will be advertised in the usual manner, explained Bourdelais. But first the School Committee must discuss the changes with both the Andover Education Association, the union representing the town's teachers, and with the Teamsters local #380, which represents the administrators because the plan will mean changes in contracts for both levels of employees.

Bourdelais told THE TOWNSMAN after the School Committee meeting that such a plan for the department had been discussed for a number of years. With only one administrator for physical edu-

By the end of the decade, cars will be reshaped by advanced aerodynamic principles.

But you don't have to wait.

From Audi's German engineers: the 5000S sedan.

While the sleek, aerodynamic designs of other car makers are still in early prototype stages, this stunning luxury sedan from Audi's German engineers is in production and available now.

The Most Aerodynamic Luxury Sedan America Has Ever Driven. Refined in European wind tunnels, the Audi 5000S slices through air with an ease and agility that are outstanding for a luxury sedan.

So "air slippery" is the design, that tracking and directional control are maintained even in severe crosswinds. Acceleration to 50 mph is accomplished in 8.0 exhilarating seconds. Handling and cornering are close to what you would expect from exotic sports cars—the result of advanced front-wheel drive technology and a performance-tuned suspension.

Inside the sumptuous interior an almost eerie quiet prevails. Gracefully curved windows mounted flush with the roofline all but eliminate wind noise.

Superior Quality Backed By A Superior Warranty. To insure the quality of the 5000S, we tested it over 3.2 million kilometers in Europe, Africa and North America. So dependable is this automobile, we've covered it with an outstanding 24-month/limited warranty with unlimited mileage. See your dealer for details and a test drive.

cation, intramural activities and school sports teams all of the programs suffer, he said.

"We have an opportunity to have two people concentrate their administrative time on athletics and physical education," Bourdelais told the committee. "It is for the good of the program that the administration should be split this way."

The proposal outlined for the School Committee shows that the cost to run the program as it is now set up is $73,939, the same amount would be spent to run the new program, according to the plan. The changes that will be made include cutting one full-time physical education teacher at the high school, for a savings of $25,133 and eliminating a resource specialist to save $2,524. A reorganization of the intramural after-school sports program will cut out programs that are duplicated and eliminate some supervision at the junior high school level to cut that budget in half from $8,135 to $4,057, for a savings of $4,078.

The Bourdelais-Swift plan also decreases the athletic business manager's job responsibilities for a savings of $2,147. That line item will now be $3,000. And additional teaching time will be added, at a cost of $3,092, because both the new program advisor positions will teach 40 percent of the time, which translates into two out of five classes a day.

There are 54 sports teams under the auspices of the schools and 66 coaching positions as well as 19 staff members within the system, according to the plan Bourdelais and Swift put together.

Summer Report

Labor Day weekend somehow is considered the official end of the summer vacation season. It seems in order, then, to afford those who have been away during this season with an update on what has transpired since Andoverites vacated the premises in June.

It's not that it has been an overly active summer season here, but there are a few things worthy of mention, for instance:

Beautification - - The area around the new municipal offices is not, as it may appear, a missile test site, but rather a continuing effort to beautify the area and provide, what else, parking facilities.

The work has been progressing through the summer and has an anticipated completion date of early October.

At that time there will be brick walkways, planters, new stairs and hundreds of little parking spots for townspeople to transact municipal business. Several hundreds of thousands of dollars have gone into the project and hopefully there will be sufficient funds to provide for a decent appearing sign in front of the municipal offices. With the millions of dollars invested in the total project the current sign adorning the entrance to the facility leaves much to be desired.

The Barrels - - The bourbon barrels are still decorating the central business district and getting more weather-beaten by the day.

The idea, of course, is a commendable one - - to lend a little beauty to the downtown area.

But the containers should be smaller and probably painted, as has been contended here before, and, hopefully, this will happen in another year.

We tend to disagree with the contention that the barrels are not too big but the flowers are too small.

Basically, the flowers are pretty, the barrels are ugly.

Vandalism - - As indicated in this week's edition of the TOWNSMAN, vandalism continues to be a problem in Andover, one without a solution.

It would be nice to apply the thousands of dollars required to remedy the effects of vandalism to more worthwhile municipal services, but as long as restless youths roam the town looking for things to destroy, then the problem will exist.

Which reminds us that this is a dangerous week. The last week of the summer season now produces a rash of parties as young people prepare to return to the rigors of educational pursuit. After a summer of recreation, it seems necessary to undertake one last bash to relieve the pressure of summer and face the stress of the return to class. Wonder what will happen when today's students become tomorrow's workers and get only a couple of weeks respite a year?

The Library - - Pleasing is the only way to describe the report this past week that the Memorial Hall library addition and renovation project may soon get underway.

Bids on the project have been received and are being reviewed, along with a finance plan which could result in the saving of over a million dollars on the project.

The long-delayed renovation of one of Andover's greatest assets now seems assured, thus providing the town with an up-to-date library facility.

Down The Years With The Townsman

75 Years Ago — August 1909

President Taft and his party have probably touched Andover several times in their automobile trips through Essex County, but so far the only Andover person to speak to him was Lewis Paine, son of Joshua D. Paine of Washington Avenue. The party were evidently a little off their track and stopped young Paine to inquire where Phillips Academy is located.

William B. Sellars has received a handsome gold watch from the Saturday Evening Post as a reward for selling the most papers in this town.

Byron D. Chandler, the so-called "boy millionaire," and Miss Grace LaRue were in Andover last Tuesday.

The football squad will meet on the cricket club grounds tomorrow afternoon for the first practice of the season. The managers of this feature of the Andover Cricket and Football Club's activities have made great progress in signing players for the season, and are assured of having a first class team.

It is about time for his Honor the Mayor of Boston to again tell that story of his, "I'm up against the real thing now." To be sure the story has done service early and late ever since he began to talk, but it was never so apropos as at the present crisis. We say "crisis" because when a great big reformer gets busy and the public discovers that he has little capacity to exist as an official let alone reformer, he the said reformer is up against a crisis.

50 Years Ago — August 1934

The local public schools will open next week and the following week with what promises again to be a record enrollment. Preliminary estimates show a total attendance of 1575 as compared with 1576 actual attendance on the opening day last year. The estimated figures are usually low, and school officials predict that the actual enrollment will approach 1600. The bulk of the increase appears in the high school which will open with morning and afternoon sessions on Wednesday.

"The finest park in this section of the country" is the future that Senator David I. Walsh predicted for the Harold Parker State Forest in a short address to the C.C.C. boys here after an inspection yesterday of the 167th and 110th companies, both located in the local forest. The senator, who was chairman of the senate committee on education and labor which drafted the C.C.C. bill, expressed himself as being very pleased with the location of the park. He described the C.C.C. work as a monument to President Roosevelt.

State and local police and fire officials have been conducting a rigid investigation the last two days into the explosion of 400 pounds of dynamite at the 167th Co., C.C.C., last Sunday night. The blast shook the entire section, and was felt as far away as Medford. Hundreds of autoists drove up from Lawrence and surrounding communities following the explosion to find out what had happened. The dynamite was located in an underground cache some distance from the camp.

25 Years Ago — August 1959

The wretched taste of the town water during the past week or so is a natural summer development, according to a report from Town Manager Thomas E. Duff to the Board of Selectmen. Steps were taken last week to meet the taste problem. Duff said Water Superintendent Donald Bassett had used 50 pounds of copper sulphate to treat the water within an area around the water intake at Haggetts Pond. This would result in killing the algae that causes the taste and some odors, it was explained.

10 Years Ago — August 1974

Come Tuesday, Sept. 10th, there aren't going to be many people in town who haven't met Gerry Cohen or Phil Coppola, or both. The two are trying to out-hoof each other from door to door, and out-phone one another, to become the Democratic nominee from the new Andover-only State Representative seat in the November election.

Town Manager J. Maynard Austin is expected to accomplish next Tuesday night what none of his predecessors have. He will be reappointed. The town's third manager since the inception of the new form of government in 1958 will have completed his first five-year appointment in Andover on Sept. 2. It is believed that the selectmen have discussed the manager's position among themselves and are agreed on Austin's reappointment.

Andover Swimmers Compete With Olympians In Europe

By Susan Rand

It hardly seems like a summer vacation when you have to get up at 4:45 a.m., every morning to be in a swimming pool in Cambridge by 7 a.m.

But, for Amy Van Aiken, 9 Wolcott Ave., and Ann Koerckel, 8 Abbott Bridge Drive, their morning workouts are a regular part of everyday life for them and for their families who act as daily taxis for the swimmers. Both are members of a swimming team called Bernal's Gator Swim Club which meets at Harvard University where coach Joseph Bernal, an assistant Olympic swimming coach this summer, runs them through the rigors of Olympic-class swimmers.

It may mean a seven mile run before jumping into the pool to swim three miles, explained Bill Van Aiken, Amy's father. Both Amy and Ann are swimming in Yugoslavia and Venice this week on an exhibition tour with Olympic medalists Sippy Woodhead and George DiCarlo.

Amy, who is 13, and Ann, 15, left with the Gators on Aug. 20 and will return on Tuesday. Bill Van Aiken said the girls were chosen for the 24-member team, 12 girls and 12 boys, out of the 100 or so swimmers that train with Bernal. Amy, who swims the freestyle in shorter distance races such as the 100 and 200 meters. Olympic swimmer Woodhead competes in Amy's specialty, which her father thinks must be a real thrill for the 13-year-old. Woodhead took a silver in the 200 meter freestyle in Los Angeles. Ann is a strong swimmer, a Gator team member for three years and swimmer for Andover High School, she competes in the breaststroke and individual medley races.

Because he has been an Olympic coach Joseph Bernal knows how to prepare youngsters who are looking towards world competition in 1988. His team has won most of the championships in the area, said Bill Van Aiken. In addition to the two to three hour morning workouts in the Harvard pool the young swimmers must return to Cambridge for an evening swimming session three nights a week.

"Bernal is really trying to develop these kids for the 1988 Olympics," Van Aiken said of the Gators.

Under the APR act, the state may purchase the development rights to a farm by paying a farmer the difference between what his farm is worth as farmland and its market value. The land is then placed under a preservation restriction — a restriction difficult and costly to break — so that it will remain a farm, and will not be sold to a developer.

The state looks for town participation in buying APR development rights, and 1981 town meeting voted to spend up to ten percent of the purchase price, or about $10,000, to purchase the rights (Article 55). During the meeting, the Conservation Commission urged voters to support the restriction because it could help keep a thriving farm in business in Andover.

But negotiations between the state and the Dargoonians for the development rights were unsuccessful, according to Virginia Hammond of the conservation commission: the farmers turned down the state's offer, because they believed the state's assessment of the farm's value was too low. The farm therefore never fell under a preservation restriction, despite the town's support for that plan.

Voters had an opportunity to participate in buying development rights to another Andover farm in 1981, but turned it down. Article 56, a proposal to spend up to $50,000 to buy the rights to Turner Farm on South Main Street, was defeated after it failed to win the necessary two-thirds majority vote.

At the time, the conservation commission supported the Turner Farm article, but emphasized that it placed higher priority on Dargoonian Brothers Farm because it was a working, food-producing farm, while Turner Farm was defunct.

Turner Farm is now under construction as a single-family residential development.

Besides Dargoonians', the only farms now remaining in Andover are the Loosigian farm on Lowell Street, and the Asoian and Retelle farms on Bellevue Road. In addition, Norman Tisbert farms parcels that belong to various owners, Hammond said, including the Andover Village Improvement Society and Hewlett-Packard.

The state's agricultural preservation restriction program "arrived too late" to help Andover preserve much farmland, Hammond commented this week. Real estate prices in the town are so high that the state can put its money elsewhere and save many more acres of food-producing land than it could afford to buy in Andover, she explained.

"Andover real estate is just too valuable to hand onto as farmland," she explained. "It's just too darned bad that Andover is going to lose all its farms, but that's just the facts of life. The conservation commission has faced the fact that we can do no more than preserve token farming in Andover."

She added that the state has found that it's more effective to preserve large blocks of farmland rather than single, isolated farms. "One farm in the middle of suburbia isn't doing much good."

Farms have, in any case, become a source of complaint when they're surrounded by residential neighborhoods, she added. Neighbors often complain about the operation of tractors, for instance, or the use of fertilizers. "Modern farming just isn't compatible with dense residential development," Hammond said.

Sandi Rehe

from the pulpit as she preached the same sermon there. Later she was offered a spot as a student minister in Ohio, which she turned down, but the offer crystallized Sandi's desire to begin study in the ministry.

A second request to preach at the Ballardvale Church left Sandi full of doubts, she had told her healing story—what else was there to say. The congregation's lay leader persisted and finally, Sandi wrote in her university essay, she agreed.

Her writings for that second sermon were interspersed with prayers and when she was finished it was as though "God had directed the writing of that second sermon. My second stint as a preacher was most successful and I realized that I felt very comfortable behind the pulpit," wrote Sandi.

With her Spanish-speaking capabilities Sandi isn't sure where a career in the ministry will take her. It may not be a conventional ministry, she may end up working in a hospital, school, jail or nursing home, but one thing is for certain, Sandi Rehe is ready to begin her new career this Thursday.

Arthritis

"Update on Arthritis" opens the fall health education series at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, September 20 at 7 p.m. in the hospital auditorium. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Dr. Matthew Heller

will describe how the diagnosis of arthritis is made, the economic impact of the disease, common misconceptions about arthritis and the various means of treating it.

Dr. Heller has practiced rheumatology on the North Shore for the past nine years. He has conducted research on new drugs for arthritis and done much to further public knowledge on the subject through published papers and TV appearances.

A film, "Wherever You Are," starring Henry Fonda, will precede the lecture.

Speaker

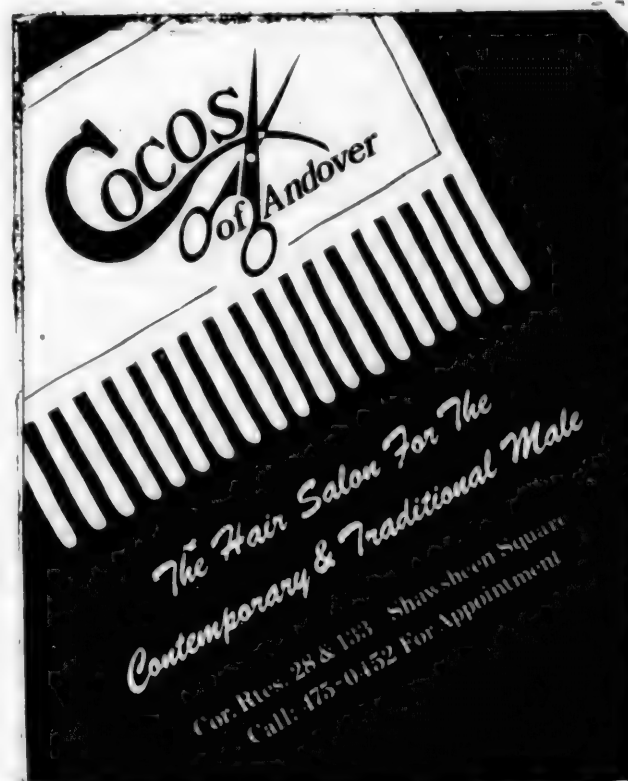

Former chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission and former U.S. Commissioner on Aging Dr. Arthur S. Flemming will make a special appearance as part of New Hampshire College's Speaker's Forum Sunday, Sept. 9, in New Hampshire Hall on North Campus at 3:30 p.m.

Dr. Flemming will discuss the "Realities and Politics of Aging" and what the future holds in store for America's elderly.

He recently told delegates at the National Council of Senior Citizens Constitutional Convention to take an active part in the coming fall elections and to confront all candidates with specific questions on issues affecting senior citizens. Flemming said health care is the number one issue confronting our nation at the present time.

Custom is lord of all mankind.

Good tennis can be seen at the North Andover Country Club, Great Pond Road, North Andover, over the Labor Day weekend.

The Essex County championships, men's singles and doubles, first held in 1903, starts Saturday, Sept. 1, at 9 a.m. Play is continuous throughout Saturday and Sunday with the singles final scheduled for 10:30 a.m. and doubles finals at 2:30 p.m. Monday.

At press time there are no Andover participants other than former resident Chris Post who was brought up in Andover and trained by his father, Gerald Post of 9 Beech Circle. Chris has been highly ranked in New England for many years, attaining the top N.E. ranking on one occasion.

The younger Post has an excellent record in this Essex County tournament, having been runner-up in the singles event in 1976, 1977, 1978, 1980 and 1983, as well as singles champion in 1979 and 1982. He holds two legs on the three-year bowl offered by the North Andover Country Club and must win a third time for permanent possession, a feat which he hopes to complete this year.

There will be tough competition, however, from John Niceforo of North Andover, doubles champion in 1983, Ken Landy of Stoneham, Peter Palandjian, a junior player from Belmont who is the 1984 singles runner-up in the New England championships in both singles and doubles. The 1983 singles champion Ted Hoehn of Jeffersonville, VT, champion four times previously and a gallery favorite, is expected among the competitors.

Information and entries can be completed with Bill Rockwell, 676 Osgood St., North Andover.

Now You Can Nail Down A 30-Year Guarantee On Treated Wood.

All green-colored wood is not alike.

Anyone who sells pressure-treated lumber for out-of-doors building projects can claim "lasting protection" against fungi and termites for their wood. Just don't try to pin them down on how long their lumber will last. Outdoor® wood puts a 30-year guarantee in writing right there on their label. Then they staple that guarantee on the end of every single piece of their lumber. Want a 30-year guarantee nailed down in writing? Look for the distinctive orange label.

Look for the label!

Care Of Flower Arrangements

Arrangements should be watered daily with tepid water, not too hot and not too cold. They should be displayed in a cool place, out of sunlight but not in drafts, either. The top of the TV set is a bad place to put flowers because it gives off heat even when it's not on. Ledges and sills near heating and air conditioning units also should be avoided.

Some flowers in arrangements may droop before others and should be removed immediately so they don't affect the rest of the blooms.

Another way to extend the life of cut flowers is to add a preservative to the water. A tablespoon of sugar to a quart of water can also be used. Aspirin dissolved in water isn't much help at all. As one florist said, "We recommend aspirin for headaches, not for flowers."

ANOVER TOWNSMAN The Business Community

AUGUST 30, 1984

Appointed Corporate Vice Pres.

Roger D. Wellington, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Augat, Inc. has announced the appointment of Richard J. Eaton as corporate vice president of human resources.

Eaton will be responsible for all policy aspects of the human resources functions of the corporation.

He has held a wide range of personnel related responsibilities with Itek Corporation over the past 11 years both at Rochester, N.Y., and most recently at its headquarters in Burlington where he has been vice president-employee relations of Itek Systems and Communications Industries. Earlier in his career he was with the Delco Products division of General Motors for nine years in several personnel management functions.

While residing in Rochester, Eaton was a member of the board of directors for a national health organization. He is a graduate of Holy Cross and attended the senior executive program of the Alfred P. Sloan School of Management at M.I.T.

Originally from Northampton, Eaton resides in Andover with his wife, Susanne, and two children, Gregg and Kathryn.

Richard J. Eaton

Augat Inc. designs and manufactures a broad range of electromechanical components and precision materials for the electronics industry and is a major supplier of related services.

Bartlett Named Director

Robert E. Bartlett of Andover has been named director of manufacturing by Network Switching Systems, developers of wide area networking products.

He will be responsible for all production operations, including the staffing and equipping of the company's initial 10,000 square-foot manufacturing facility. The facility will be doubled in size in July 1985 to support the changeover from first-quarter evaluation units to standard, full-featured products.

"Staffing will be particularly critical," Bartlett noted, "because these are advanced technology products."

Firm Changes Name

Precision Electronics Company, the nation's oldest distributor of NEC telephone systems, has changed its name to PRECOM, Precision Communications, Inc., according to Charles Garabedian, Jr., president.

He said the reason for the name change was to more accurately reflect the company's primary business as a designer and installer of sophisticated, multiple-line PABX (private automatic branch exchange) telephone communication systems for large businesses.

Ironically, the company was originally named Precision Communications when it was founded in 1946 by Garabedian's father, Charles Garabedian, Sr. It soon became Precision Electronics Co., and early on specialized in industrial and institutional sound systems for internal communications.

Precision got into the telephone interconnect business in the 1960s and became the first NEC distributor in the United States when the Japanes electronics giant introduced its telephone equipment here to compete with AT&T systems.

Today, PRECOM is a major designer and installer of large, complex computer-based telephone systems for businesses and institutions in Greater Boston, eastern Massachusetts and south central New Hampshire and Maine.

PRECOM customers range from Fortune 1000 companies requiring sophisticated PBX systems to medium and smaller businesses requiring from four to 50 station telephone systems for internal communications.

The company's headquarters and primary operations are located at 191 Chandler Road, Andover, with a secondary operations center and warehouse at 400 Washington St., Dover, N.H.

The change from Precision Electronics to PRECOM will involve all new logos and signage, but will not affect company personnel or day-to-day operations, Garabedian said.

New Members

The board and members of the Merrimack Valley Chorale wish to extend an invitation to all who would like to become members to attend the first rehearsal of the new season on Tuesday, Sept. 4, at 8 p.m. at the Old Town Hall, Route 4, Chelmsford Center. No auditions are required. The Merrimack Valley Chorale, directed by Ralph Farris, consists of 60 members from the Merrimack Valley area who enjoy singing music ranging from the classical to the popular.

The chorale will begin rehearsing for the third annual Christmas Concert in which Handel's "Messiah" will be presented in three separate performances. The Merrimack Valley Chorale meets very Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Open House

The DeCordova Museum School will be open to the public on Sunday, Sept. 9, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Visitors can wander through painting and pottery studios, see a ceramist in action and witness silver yielding itself to the hands of a talented silversmith. Other demonstrations by students and faculty include life drawing, photography, portraiture, stone carving, jewelry making and stained glass.

Students can register for the fall term which begins September 22. The Museum School offers classes in all major areas of the fine arts and art crafts specifically geared to all ages and degrees of expertise. Courses are available six days a week during day and evening hours. Students can also register at the school office or by phone on or before Monday, Sept. 10.

To do exactly the opposite is also a form of imitation.

Lowell Temple Registering

Registration for the Religious School of Temple Emanuel of Merrimack Valley is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 9, between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Classes begin the same day, starting at 10 a.m.

The school offers a full program of Jewish education, grades one through nine, and service the entire Merrimack Valley area and southeastern New Hampshire. Emphasis is on Jewish history and values, reading Hebrew and festivals, mini-courses, prayers, songs, ritual and field trips.

Homework in Hebrew is assigned for two days during the week, to be initiated by parents. Active parent participation is encouraged and a special workshop, organized and run by parents, is being planned for November 11.

Temple Emanuel of Merrimack Valley is located at 101 West Forest Street, Lowell. Nancy Rovin is chairperson, assisted by Amy Wolfson, Gail Brater, Mary Klein, Andrea Bachnew and Lois Ades.

To Build Treatment Facility

The Badger Company, Inc. and its subsidiaries have been awarded a $2 million contract from Enzyme Bio-Systems Ltd. (EB), a subsidiary of CPC International, to design and construct a waste-water treatment plant for EB's grass roots enzyme production facility now under construction in Beloit, Wisc.

The plant is being designed to treat approximately 800,000 gallons per day of fermentation and food processing wastewater containing an estimated 37,000 pounds per day of Chemical Oxygen Demand (COD) from EB and approximately ten other plants located adjacent to the EB site in Beloit Industrial Park.

The new treatment plant will utilize the CELROBIC system which has been com-mercially used by the Celanese Chemical Company, Inc. for nearly a decade. The system converts the COD in the wastewater to methane gas suitable for use as a fuel. Badger has licensed the technology and has complete responsibility for the design and construction of the new facility scheduled for completion in March 1985.

Benjamin Franklin invented the rocking chair.

Volunteers Needed

Elder Services at Choate-Symes Hospitals, Inc. is seeking a volunteer five to eight hours a week.

Main duties will be to assist Maxine Lyons, the elder services coordinator, in a variety of elder services functions, including a monthly Sunday brunch program at the Symmes Hospital Division. Valuable experience can be gained by attending meetings of geriatric services providers in the community.

For more information, contact Lyons or Mrs. Eleanor Matthews, director of volunteer services, at Symmes.

On April 10, 1849, Walter Hunt of New York city received a patent for his invention of the safety pin.

Andover Hockey Shop

Outfitters For All Sports

It's back to school time and the Andover Hockey Shop, Shawsheen Square is the place for all your sporting needs. Whether your youngster needs a gym uniform, soccer equipment or you need running shoes, the Hockey Shop has all you need.

With the fall many sports are beginning new seasons and the Andover Hockey Shop has it all. Both boys and girl required gym suits as well as gym bags are stocked. Cheerleaders, field hockey players, skateboarders and lacrosse players will find what they're looking for.

Soccer enthusiasts of any age will find the soccer shoes required by the various local leagues, soccer balls and shin pads.

Football shoes, footballs, and pads are there for the football fans. The hockey shop also has team jackets, jerseys and more.

They stock all the equipment and supplies for golf, tennis, racquetball, paddleball and handball, too. Owners Leo and Ruth Gravel along with their son Sandy enjoy working with you and your youngsters to select the proper equipment and ensure the correct fit.

Joggers of all ages will find a good selection of running shoes in the new "Sneaker Room." In fact, the Hockey Shop is the headquarters in this area for Nike, Spot Bilt and New Balance running shoes.

Hockey season is never far away. As the hockey supply headquarters in this area, the Hockey Shop has everything to completely outfit you or your youngster for hockey. With everything from ice hockey skates to sticks, pads and clothing, you can shop conveniently in one stop. They also have figure skates and outfits.

So for your school and sports supplies head for the one-stop shop — the Andover Hockey Shop. You know you'll get friendly, dependable service. Open daily 10-8 and Sat. 9-5 Tel. 475-7474

Jessie B. Rosen

Jessie B. (Labell) Rosen of 30 Railroad St., Andover, died Sunday, Aug. 26, at Lawrence General Hospital. She was 78.

Mrs. Rosen was born in Shirley, and had lived in Lawrence during most of her life. She moved to Andover three years ago. A Lawrence high School graduate, she was employed as a secretary with the Labell Furniture Company of Lawrence before retiring in 1970. She belonged to the Lawrence Chapter of Hadassah.

The widow of Benjamin Rosen, Mrs. Rosen leaves one daughter, Regina Levine of Andover; one son, David, of Andover; four brothers, Max, Benjamin, Barney and Joseph Labell, all of Florida; nine grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Everett Oser as well.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Temple Emanuel, Andover. Burial was in Tifereth Israel Anshai Sfar Cemetery, Lawrence. Memorial week was to be observed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Levine, 59 Wild Rose Drive, Andover. Funeral arrangements were under the direction of the Schlossberg-Goldman-Fisher Memorial Chapels.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Joseph D. Granetz Fund, care of Mauri Sherman, 4 Tudor Ave., Lawrence.

Patricia M. Graham

Patricia M. (Tobin) Graham, 45, 39 Farrwood Drive, Andover, died Saturday at Brigham and Womens Hospital, Boston following a short illness.

She was born in Philadelphia, Penn., the daughter of the late James and Veronica (Zuggi) Tobin.

She is survived by her husband, Stephen D. Graham of Andover; three sisters, Ellen M. Press and Elizabeth Koby, both of Philadelphia, Penn. and Veronica M. Letscher of Birmingham, Mich.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Edgerley and Bessom Funeral Home, 743 Main St., Reading.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Jimmy Fund, 44 Binney St., Boston, MA. 02215.

Enrolled

Tina McCarter, 141 North St., Andover, has enrolled in the retail merchandising program at Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston for the fall semester.

The program prepares students to select, obtain and sell merchandise at the retail level.

The college serves students with both career and more traditional academic interests.

Vernie E. Marks

Vernie E. (Livingston) Marks of Nutley, N.J., a former Andover resident, died Wednesday, Aug. 22, at her home. She was 60.

Mrs. Marks was born in Andover. She was a former resident of White Plains, N.Y., and had moved to Nutley 30 years ago. She graduated from the Baptist Institute of Philadelphia in 1949, and served as a church administrator at the Vincent United Methodist Church of Nutley. She belonged to the United Methodist Women of the church as well.

She leaves her husband, Leslie M. Marks, Jr.; one daughter, Donna (Mrs. Nicholas) Cianfrone of Edison, N.J.; one son, Richard A. of Passaic Park, N.J.; her father, Harold S. Livingston of Andover; one sister, Emily (Mrs. Thomas) Murphy of Andover; and three grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Vincent United Methodist Church Memorial Fund, Vincent Place, Nutley, N.J.

Louis Carpentier of 28 Hamlet St., Lawrence, died Sunday, Aug. 26, at his home. He was 89.

Born in France, Mr. Carpentier had come to Lawrence 69 years ago. He was employed as a weaver in the Wood Mill for more than 45 years, until the mill closed during the fifties. He formerly belonged to the French-American Club of Lawrence.

He leaves his wife of 66 years, Germaine (Desmet) Carpentier; one son, Albert L. of North Andover; one grandson, James P. Carpentier of Andover; one granddaughter, Jane E. (Mrs. William) Batchelder of Andover; five great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at Pollard Funeral Home, 233 Lawrence St., Methuen. Burial was in Bellevue Cemetery.

Memorial contributions may be made to Lawrence General Hospital, or to the charity of one's choice.

Osteoporosis

All women should know about osteoporosis, a bone-thinning condition affecting one in four women over age 60 and a major cause of fractures of the spine, hip, wrist and other bones. Treatment may help women who have the disorder and steps can be taken to help prevent it.

Osteoporosis develops silently over a period of many years. Gradually and without discomfort, the bones thin out until some break, causing pain and disability.

Decreasing hormone levels, inadequate calcium in the diet, not enough exposure to sunlight and inactivity all may play a role in osteoporosis development.

Doctors often prescribe calcium tablets, sometimes with added vitamin D. Because large amounts of vitamin D can be harmful, it's important to take only the amount recommended by a doctor.

People who have osteoporosis should eat dairy products high in calcium and dark green leafy

WILL MORTGAGE RATES MATTER?

Some years ago the real estate market stumbled when money was tight and mortgage rates soared near 20 percent in some areas. But the situation has eased considerably, and bankers expect lending rates to remain fairly stable over the next few years. If you're planning to sell your home, interest rates should not be a major concern.

More basic than day-to-day changes in money rates is locating a buyer who wants a home like yours and can afford it. That's where the help of a real estate professional is so important.

We can ask the questions you wouldn't be comfortable asking a stranger - and get accurate answers, too. We'll find out the prospect's income and assets. We'll know if he has the down payment needed to swing the deal, and enough income to convince a bank to lend him the rest.

And when we find a prospect who's right for your property, we'll take over the details of showing it and negotiating the best price for you.

Put the real estate professionals to work for you with

A public hearing will be held in THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE CONFERENCE ROOM, SCHOOL OFFICE BUILDING, SECOND FLOOR, WHITTIER STREET ENTRANCE on THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1984 at 7:30 P.M. on the petition of BAY BANK MERRIMACK VALLEY, 23 Main Street, Andover, MA. for a special permit under Article VIII, Section VIII.C. and IV.B.11A. of the Zoning Bylaw to permit a branch bank facility in an Industrial D district, and relief from Board decision #1575, Condition #8.

Premises affected is an office building to be constructed on the property owned by S. Joseph Hoffman on River Road, Andover, MA. in an Industrial D district and is shown on Assessor's Map 165 as Lot 1B.

WESLEY E. WHITNEY,
CHAIRMAN
BOARD OF APPEALS
Dates of Issue:
August 23 & 30, 1984

Breadfruit is a staple food to people of the Pacific's tropic islands. The part that lies between the skin and the score looks like new bread. It makes an excellent pudding when mixed with coconut milk.

A simple way to acquire a million dollars is to get a job from someone who is willing to pay you a penny the first day and double your salary every day for a month. By the 28th day you will be earning over $1 million.

REALTOR

NEW OR EXISTING HOME?

If you are in the market to buy a home but haven't made up your mind whether it will be a new or an existing one, you should let your Realtor help you weigh the merits of each. For instance, you will probably find a wider selection of older homes for sale. Also, when you compare living space, location, construction materials, and other factors, you may be getting more for your money if you buy an older home.

Older homes tend to be closer to established shopping areas, churches, and other neighborhood attractions. Homes in established neighborhoods also have a more "settled" look, with mature trees and shrubbery. On the other hand, new houses have obvious advantages, too.

When you're dealing with an experienced Real Estate broker, however, you have already made one of the most important decisions long before you find the house you want to buy.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at THE HOWE AGENCY, 5 PUNCHARD AVE., Andover. Phone: 475-5100. We're here to help.

downtown parking problems.

Morin, who did not attend Tuesday night's meeting, could not be reached for further comment on his plans yesterday.

Jeton urged the board to come up with a specific plan for CBD expansion because, she said, other proposals similar to Morin's may soon come before them — one is already "in the works" for a Chestnut Street parcel, she noted.

The construction of Andover businessman Robert Finlayson's retail shopping mall off Park Street, facing what will eventually be a town parking lot on Bartlet Street, may be inspiring some residential property-owners in the Park Street area to consider rezoning their land for business, Jeton indicated.

Board members Paul Curley and Michael Houghton have formed a subcommittee to study potential CBD expansion, as well as downtown parking. Houghton said he believed the subcommittee would have a set of preliminary recommendations, or "guidelines" on how the district might be expanded, ready in October.

Another subcommittee, including Bradshaw, Jeton and planner Andrew Girdwood, has been studying housing needs in town, and that subcommittee will also present its ideas to the full board in October, Bradshaw said.

The housing subcommittee has been reviewing a multiple-family housing by-law proposal that the planning board proposed to annual town meeting in 1981 (Article 17). Although that proposal for a multi-family overlay district was defeated, it was actually "rather conservative" and included a number of ideas that still look promising, the chairman said.

The subcommittee is now considering defining a multi-family zone without mapping a location for it in town. Developers, with planning board approval, could propose multi-family zones with the same population density a single-family residential development would have — like the Poor Street condominium approved by town meeting this year.

Or, with town meeting approval, they could propose multi-family developments that would increase the density, but to an extent far less than the 12-units-per-building currently allowed in the Apartment zone.

All multi-family parcels would have to be served by town water and sewer, Bradshaw emphasized.

After its October discussions of the business district and multiple-family housing, the planning board will be ready to begin holding public hearings on their recommendations as a prelude to spring town meeting.

And Jeton suggested that in addition to those hearings, the planners try to explain their proposals to townspeople with a variety of public education forums.
